Chief Huck Says Work Just Begun In Fight On Dope

Number Of Youths Is Great; Pushers Held Still In Sausalito

By FRANK FARRARA

Sausalito has "just scratched the surface" in its fight against marijuana and narcotics, Police Chief Kenneth H. Huck said last night.

"The major part of the problem is still before us," he told about 30 representatives of churches, service clubs and local organizations at city hall.

"The amount of youth involved is a great number," Huck said. "You see in the newspaper, 100 or 150. We have more than that in Sausalito who have tried or used marijuana."

Huck said pushers are still in Sausalito, and he has seen them cruising around and "peeking around trees" at Vina del Mar, the downtown park.

Asked why police didn't "roust them," Huck explained that "it takes evidence and it takes time to get evidence. We spent six months to get eight or ten pushers."

RECENT RAIDS

The recent raids will stop sales for a while but will not eradicate the problem, he said.

"We have won a partial battle, but from this point on we'll have to stay on it, tight and close."

Law enforcement officers will have to "keep the heat" on the peddlers, he said. "It's important to cut off the source, reduce traffic. Make the supply so scare the youth can't get it."

The special meeting in Sausalito was called to enlist community support of an education program to inform parents and juveniles about marijuana and narcotics.

The program planned by Huck would teach parents "to know marijuana when they see it."

MOTHER TOLD

The chief told of a mother who had seen her son rolling a marijuana cigarette and thought it was tobacco. "Another boy smoked marijuana in bed before going to sleep," he said. "It was this much out in the open and the parents did not know."

Lt. Ted Zink, who displayed marijuana, narcotics and hypo kits used by addicts, said one youth was growing marijuana plants in a window box. Once, when he was going away, he asked his grandmother to water it, and she did, Zink said.

A few hours earlier Robert H. Prather, principal at Tamalpais High School, announced that any students using or possessing marijuana near or on campus will be permanently excluded from the school.

In a statement read to students, Prather said: "Many of

Four Students Arrested For Dope At Cal

BERKELEY (AP) — Four students at the University of California and the girl friend of another were under arrest today in connection with what police said was a drug peddling operation on the Berkeley campus.

The arrests yesterday culminated several weeks of investigation by narcotics agents and Berkeley police.

Police said they confiscated large quantities of so - called "mind-expanding" drugs such as LSD and DMT.

Shannon Ferguson, 22, and Howard Rodkins, 23, were charged with possession of marijuana, a felony.

Charged with selling dangerous drugs, a misdemeanor, were Joseph Shields, a senior, and Robert Novick, 28, a graduate student in history.

All four were taken to the Berkeley jail and later released on bail.

Police also arrested an 18-year old San Francisco secretary, identified as Anna Chepourkoff, in the apartment of another student. Officers said they confiscated 1,000 capsules tentatively identified as LSD and a small amount of marijuana.

The four students were arrested after an agent said he paid for 144 ampules of DMT and discovered a cache of marijuana. Officers said they later went to Shields' apartment and found 720 DMT ampules.

Investigation was pointed to the Berkeley campus by a report of Sherrif Larry Gillick of Butte County. He said efforts had been made to import LSD and other drugs to Chico State College and Berkeley was indicated as the source. Gillick said he advised Berkeley authorities after one of his men, disguised as a purchaser, made a contact near the U.C. stadium.

Average Tax In U.S. $250

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Census Bureau reports that Americans paid an average of $250 per person in state and local taxes during the 1964 fiscal year.

It said yesterday that state averages varied from $146 in South Carolina to more than $300 in California, Nevada and New York.

The figures were included in a bureau report on state and local government finances.

It said that general revenues for state and local governments during the year amounted to $68.4 billion and their expenditures totaled $69.3 billion.

Nine Face Jail Terms In Dope Case

If they are convicted, the nine adults indicted Wednesday by the Marin County Grand Jury for marijuana sales face terms of five years to life in prison.

The Health and Safety Code also specifies that persons sent to prison on such convictions are ineligible for parole until they have served at least three years.

One of the nine, as well as a tenth defendent, were indicted for possession of marijuana. This carries a term of one to 10 years.

A third charge, that of possessing marijuana for the purpose of selling it, was levelled against another of the nine defendents. This carries a two to 19 year term, of which at least two years must be served.

Medics Urge Coroner Job Be Part-Time

The Marin Medical Society has recommended that the position of Marin County coroner be deleted as an elective office and filled by a part-time physician.

The county board of supervisors, which asked a report on the subject from the society, will consider the report at its meeting at the Civic Center at 2 p.m. Monday.

Society President Ira H. Degenhardt, in a letter to supervisors, says that the office of coroner could best be consolidated with that of the district attorney, although some counties have consolidated the office with the sheriff.

"Although Marin County can continue for an indefinite period with a layman coroner, it has become evident that a physician serving in the role of coroner is necessary, exactly as physicians are needed to be director of the public health, mental health and county medical departments.

"Potential criticism of the conflict of interest which has been leveled at the layman coroner is not apt to be significant with a physician coroner," Dr. Degenhardt writes.

Also on Monday's agenda is a recommendation from County Sanitarian William L. Desmond that a deadline be placed on

Supervisors Create Department Of Data

Marin County Supervisors, acting on the recommendation of two department heads, yesterday created a new county department of data processing.

The action was recommended both by County Administrator Alan Bruce and Auditor-Controller Michael Mitchell. Data processing, since it began in county government eight years ago, has been a bureau in Mitchell's department.

With the change was included a salary range increase for Arleigh Sewell who has headed the bureau and will head the department when the change becomes effective July 1.

The pay range goes from $914-$1,111 a month to $960-$1,160 a month.

The shift is tied in with a program to analyze data processing for further use in accounting. First thing to be analyzed will be the procedures used in dealing with property accounts.

This relates to the assessors office and ties in with an agreement the board made earlier this week to speed up assessing practices so sharp increases—now experienced with cyclical reappraisals— can be avoided.

Sewell will work with John L. Gibb, senior administrative analyst in Bruce's office, to develop the programs. An outside specialist also will be retained for the study.

The specialist's aid will be paid for with $5,540 the county expects to save by changing next fall from the IBM 1401 computer to the 360 model. The data processing action was the major

Oak Moths Hit Trees In County

Marin county is being invaded by oak moths in the biggest numbers in at least eight years, according to county agricultural commissioner Richard T. Straw.

Actually the moths have been here in another form for some time, but the loss of leaves on live oaks is just now being noticed. Also the clouds of moths emerging from the larvae are just being reported, Straw said.

It is while in the larvae form that the oak moth does all its damage.

"They've actually denuded some trees," Straw said.

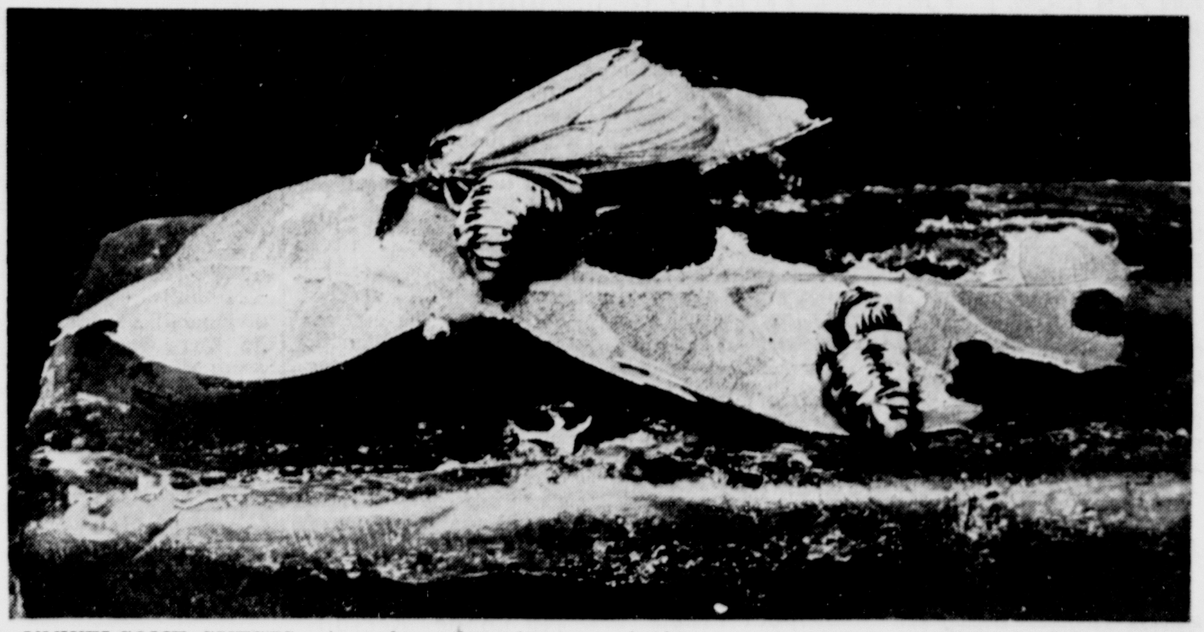

The big trouble is that it is too late now to do anything about the moths, Straw said.

Spraying will not harm them now that they are out of the larvae stage. DDT spraying should have been done earlier this spring to kill the larvae that "wintered over" on the trunk and branches of the oaks.

Now the leaves are eaten and the moths are flying around the trees like "halos," Straw said.

These moths will lay eggs which will turn into larvae and emerge as moths again in early October. Spraying should be done in the early fall, Straw said.

His office only gives advice on the problem. He suggested that tree owners have their trees inspected to make sure the larvae is really there before spraying is ordered. Otherwise, beneficial insects might be killed needlessly.

UNWELCOME GUESTS—An oak moth and two of its pupae are shown on chewed-up oak leaf. The moths and pupae do not eat the leaf, but the larvae, between these two stages, is a voracious leaf-eater—of oak leaves only. County Agricultural Commissioner Richard T. Straw reports the worst oak moth invasion in years in Marin. (Independent-Journal photo)

Fighting Flares Near Dong Xoai

Battalion Is Under Heavy Red Attack

SAIGON (AP) — Renewed fighting flared tonight outside Dong Xoai between 500 Viet Cong guerrillas and a Vietnamese airborne battalion, a U.S. military spokesman said.

The spokesman said a U.S. Air Force pilot was killed when enemy ground fire in the area, 60 miles north of Saigon, downed his F100 Supersabre jet.

The source said the 7th Airborne Battalion — an estimated 450 men — was under heavy attack and apparently retreating toward Dong Xoai. It had been pressing the Viet Cong back after a bloody battle Thursday and yesterday.

WENT TO AID

Three companies in the battalion went to the aid of a fourth that was reported heavily engaged with the Viet Cong about two miles north of Dong Xoai.

The downed American pilot was flying in support of the government troops. Witnesses said he ejected before the plane crash and his parachute apparently opened.

However, a U.S. Army helicopter sent to evacuate him reported he was dead. He was the 410th known U.S. casualty of the war, but the total may go higher where final results of the fighting at Dong Xoai are known.

Three Americans are known dead and 15 are missing.

BOATS BOMBED

In the air, U.S. warplanes reported they sank or damaged 15 boats in a strike about 120 miles inside North Viet Nam.

A U. S. military spokesman said the vessels opened fire on the four U. S. Air Force Thunderchiefs just before they attacked. The planes dropped eight tons of bombs on the boats during the 30-minute strike.

In another raid over North Viet Nam, the spokesman said 25 F-105 Thunderchiefs hammered several targets about 130 miles southwest of Hanoi near the Laotian border. They destroyed three buildings at the Muong Sen communications site and seven military barracks.

Reed Money Woe Charged; 'Nonsense'

Marin County Auditor-Controller Michael Mitchell charged yesterday that the Reed Union School District is in "financial difficulty."

"Nonsense," retorted Reed Supt. Edward C. Pino.

Mitchell's comment came after the Reed District asked to borrow $50,000 from the county to pay bills and payrolls due this fiscal year.

County officials sent back word that the loan might be approved by county supervisors only if borrowed after July 1, first day of the new fiscal year, when the loan would be applied against anticipated tax monies to come in that year.

"This is the first time in the 15 years I've been in the auditor's office that a school district has run into such financial difficulties at the end of the fiscal year," Mitchell said.

"I disagree with him," Pino said. "After all our receipts are in, they will more than offset all the disbursements for this fiscal year. We have chosen not to have a large reserve but instead to borrow against anticipated receipts."

The sequence of events leading up to Mitchell's charge apparently ran like this:

The Reed district asked to borrow $50,000 from county funds, as many school districts do so as to tide them over until

Districts Fuss Hits Assembly

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — The fight over Senate reapportionment hit the Assembly floor today and threatened to end in a legislative deadlock.

As the lawmakers neared the final week of the 1965 session, both houses held Saturday meetings. The Senate planned to meet tomorrow.

The Senate remapping battle was shipped to the lower chamber floor late yesterday when the Elections and Reapportionment Committee quickly met and approved a plan for redrawing district lines in the upper chamber.

The committee-approved plan was almost identical to one proposed by Chairman Don A. Allen Sr., D-Los Angeles, Wednesday.

It keeps the Senate-passed plan generally intact—but draws district lines in five two-senator counties and revamps Los An-

WIRE NEWS BRIEFS From Everywhere

Beatles Win Honor For 'Stuff'

LONDON (UPI) — It's official! An astonished Britain learned today that the Beatles have been named on the Queen's list of birthday honors—as Members of the Order of the British Empire (MBE).

In the list—among the generals, civil servants and other dignataries usually connected with the coveted annual award—were "Mr. J. Lennon," "Mr. P. McCartney," "Mr. R. Starr," and "Mr. G. Harrison."

In short, the Beatles!

The four mopheads, who rose from humble beginnings in a Liverpool cabaret to the status of millionaires, now may inscribe "MBE" after their signatures and wear the rose-pink satin sash of the order.

"I didn't think you could get it for this sort of thing," exclaimed Lennon. "I thought you had to drive tanks and win wars and stuff."

U.C. Sit-In Trial Is Over

BERKELEY (UPI)—The trial of 672 University of California sit-in demonstrators was over today after 11 weeks and over 4,300 pages of testimony.

Municipal Judge Rupert Crittenden, who heard the case without a jury, yesterday took the evidence under submission and said he would hand down a verdict June 28 on the 155 cases being tried as a representative group. The other 517 defendants have agreed to abide by the decision.

During the lengthy trial, testimony on all aspects of the Dec. 2-3 student rebel Free Speech Movement (FSM) demonstration at the university administration building were given.

A total of 773 persons were arrested Dec. 3 after a singing, shouting, hand-clapping sit-in. The demonstration was held by students in their semester-long fight for increased political rights on the campus.

Senate Votes LBJ Foreign Aid Bill Cut

$20-Million Slash From Authorization

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate has voted a $200 million across-the-board cut in President Johnson's foreign aid authorization bill.

The action came late yesterday on an amendment by Sen. Wayne Morse, D-Ore., to reduce authorizations for each of the next two years from $3,443,170,000 to $3,243,170,000, which carried 40 to 35.

Sen. Mike Mansfield, D-Mont., the majority leader, announced after the vote that the leadership planned to keep the Senate in session Monday night in the hope of completing action on the bill.

WASTE CHARGED

Morse charged the program had resulted in billions of dollars of waste through mismanagement, and called it "a stinking mess." But he was defeated earlier, 54 to 26, when he sought to cut it by $443,170,000 to an even $3 billion.

He announced he will call up more amendments Monday seeking to cut the program on a "country-by-country basis."

The $200 million cut was the first opponents had succeeded in making since the bill reached the Senate floor a week ago Friday.

BOTH SIDES

Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, was defeated, 53 to 38, yesterday on an amendment to cut military assistance by $115 million, from $1,170,000,000 to $1,055,000,000. He argued that the United States is providing military equpment for opposing forces of Pakistan and India as well as opposing forces of Turkey and Greece, and that the cuts should be taken from those programs.

The Senate, by a 42-39 vote, also put a ceiling of 15 per cent on the amount of U. S. development loan funds that can be transferred to international agencies for lending.

CUT OFFSET

The amendment was offered by Sen. Frank J. Lausche, D-Ohio. Only Thursday, the Senate rejected an amendment by Sen. Ernest Gruening, D-Alaska, to keep the ceiling on transfer authority at the existing 10 per cent, instead of the 20 per cent recommended by the Foreign Relations Committee.

The Morse amendment would allow the administration to distribute the $200 million cut among the various foreign aid programs as it chooses.

While the bill has been cut $200 million, this reduction has been partially offset by previous Senate action adding $89 million to the measure to launch President Johnson's economic and social development program in South Viet Nam, Thailand and Laos.

Sculptor Named For Library Job

Mill Valley Library trustees Thursday night commissioned sculptor Richard E. O'Hanlon to design a piece of sculpture to be placed outside the new library in Old Mill Park.

O'Hanlon, who lives at 616 Throckmortion Avenue, teaches sculpture at University of California, Berkeley.

Payment for the art work, reported Mrs. John P. Farnham, board president, is to come from 1 per cent of the new library's budget which has already been set aside.

"We had a 200 per cent increase in public attendance last night," said Mrs. Farnham. "We had two persons in the audience. Normally no one attends."

Astronauts Getting Chance To Rest Some

SPACE CENTER, Houston (UPI) — With the bright silver of Air Force lieutenant colonels as partial reward from their commander - in - chief and a grateful nation, surprised spacemen James McDivitt and Edward White today began a brief respite with their families.

For the two men who circled earth 62 times in four days and who said they would "be willing to do it all over again — on a longer flight," it was the first chance in three weeks to take it easy at home with their wives and children.

They even turned down a chance to spend the weekend with President Johnson at his Texas LBJ Ranch.

The President said the astronauts felt "it would focus too much attention on them."

But the respite would be a brief one.

Still ahead was Monday's ticker - tape parade in Chicago, hometown celebrations in Jackson, Mich., and San Antonio, Tex., for McDivitt and White respectively, and a promise to visit the White House within the next 1½ weeks to get medals.

In a sure - footed recitation of their 96 - hour 56 - minute adventure, the Gemini-4 twins said they felt man needed only more food, more fuel for maneuvering a jet gun, a little extra equipment and better planning of rest periods to make longer, more ambitious flights to "spacewalk" and to "rendezvous" with other satellites in space.

As it was, they left only one record standing — the 119-hour endurance mark set two years ago by Russian Valery Bykovsky.

For their efforts, they began to reap the rewards yesterday in a unique gift - exchanging visit with President Johnson at the Houston Manned Spacecraft Center.

The "little token" that Johnson promised them during a conversation while they were still aboard the aircraft carrier USS Wasp returning to land turned out to be presidential nominations for promotions from Air Force major to lieutenant colonel "for their spectacular achievements."

This, the president added with a smile, "is something you can eat as well as wear."

For good measure, Johnson promoted Gemini-3 pilot Virgil I. (Gus) Grissom to a similar rank, and said astronaut Gordon Cooper will be elevated to Air Force lieutenant colonel on July 15.

Cooper, one of the original seven Mercury astronauts, will pilot the Gemini-5 spaceship alongside co-pilot Charles (Pete) Conrad on a flight now set for Aug. 9. It is expected to last seven days to break virtually all the records McDivitt and White have just set.

Bank Employees' Slayer Gives Up

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — "I'm tired of running. I want to surrender."

Duane Pope, 22 years old and fresh out of college, said it twice yesterday, first to the president of his college and then in a telephone call to police. By surrendering, Pope ended a nation-wide search that began a week earlier when the president and two employees of a Big Springs, Neb., bank were shot to death during a holdup.

The FBI took charge of Pope shortly after his surrender and within 90 minutes had him arraigned before U. S. Commissioner Lee Cisel. He then was jailed in lieu of $100,000 bond.

Pope called Dr. D. W. Bittinger, president of McPerson, (Kan.) College, shortly after checking in at the State Hotel in downtown Kansas City. He said he had heard Dr. Bittinger's appeal that he surrender.

"He wanted to know if I would call his parents and how they were reacting to all of the publicity," Dr. Bittinger said.

"He also asked me what he could do and I told him to surrender."

DUANE POPE
Tired of running

Minutes later, police dispatcher Cpl. Vernon Scoville received this call:

"I want to give myself up. I understand I'm wanted for robbery in Big Springs, Neb." Scoville: "Who is this?" "I'm Duane Pope."

Bird Survey Under Way On Importance Of Bay

State Fish and Game scientists are taking a bird survey of San Francisco Bay so they will be able to answer developers who ask "what good is the bay for wildlife?"

The survey will show the "importance and value" of tidelands, said state game officials in San Francisco.

The survey, which began last fall, has turned up 60 species of water and shore birds within Richardson Bay.

Lynn Stafford, a naturalist at the Audubon Center of Northern California on the Tiburon Peninsula, has been checking bay birds from just north of Sausalito around the bay and down west shore road in Belvedere, with side trips to the Mill Valley marsh and Belvedere lagoon.

Stafford pointed out that most birds in Richardson Bay are wintering here or are migrants pausing to feed and rest. He surveys the bay twice each month and, with other bird watchers, will continue through this winter.

The highest bird counts Stafford has found during his one-day surveys are: 2,485 Grebes, 1,085 Pintail ducks, 2,220 Canvasback ducks, and 9,834 Sand Pipers.

Some of the rarer visitors to Richardson Bay he has seen are a pair of Gadwall ducks, one Clapper Rail, three Snipe and three Long Billed Curlews.

Three Behr Children To Graduate

The three children of Mr. and Mrs. Peter H. Behr of Mill Valley are to be graduated from schools in various parts of California this month.

Behr is chairman of the Marin County Board of Supervisors.

His son, Peter H. Behr Jr. completed work this week at Midlands School near Santa Barbara. He is enrolled as a National Merit Scholar at Yale University this fall.

The couple's eldest daughter, Lola, will receive her Bachelor of Arts degree tomorrow from Stanford University, where she is being graduated with highest honors as a Phi Beta Kappa. She expects to spend the summer in Greece and continue travelling in Europe in the fall.

Her sister, Trudi, is being graduated from Marin County Day School and will attend the Katherine Branson School in Ross in the fall.

Terra Linda Officers Elected

Shand Stephens was elected fall semester president of the junior class in a run-off with Greg Aczgus, and Tish Sellers was elected senior class secretary in a run-off with Cindy Weltner.

Other offices were filled during the regular election Thursday.

Jack Delman was elected as sophomore class president for the entire school year, starting a new system whereby all class officers eventually will be elected for a full year.

Other new officers are:

Members of next year's student council, to serve both semesters, will be seniors Diane Abraham, Steve Blair, Pat Byrne, Cathy Calaway, Kathy Hansen, Belinda Holmes and Sam Osborne; one taken during budget deliberations yesterday.

Juniors Ellen Greenberg, Julie Hastings, Robert King, Laurie Oliver, Rob Martinez, Jane Warner and Joyce Warriner;

The board approved budgets for the administrator, the board of supervisors, the auditor-controller, the treasurer-tax collector, the county counsel and communications department. All had minor changes.

The employee benefits budget, covering the retirement and insurance programs, was held up when Supervisor Ernest N. Ketenhofen questioned the surviving spouse benefit in the insurance program.

He said the premiums were not tied in to any actuary accounts on age of employees and their wives. He asked for a study of this to see if corrections could be made. Other board members thought the changes, if any, would have to be made after completion of the 1965-66 budget.

Supervisor Byron W. Leydecker presided yesterday in the absence of chairman Peter H. Behr.

Waldo Point property owners for installation of sewer facilities to prevent further pollution of Richardson Bay. This was prompted by the Bay Area Regional Water Pollution Control Board's tentative resolution for a new cease and desist order.

The two above items will be discussed on the afternoon agenda. After a supper recess the board will reconvene at 8 p.m. Discussion of continued county support for a handicapped recreation program, the final item on the agenda, is to be taken up at 9 p.m.

New Policy On County Cars Due

A new policy on employee use of Marin County vehicles, aimed at cracking down on abuses, is being prepared by Asst. County Administrator John F. Barrows.

Barrows told the board of supervisors yesterday that it will make it tougher for an employee to drive a county car home at night. A pooling system for county cars is also being considered

The report came up when Dist. Atty. Bruce B. Bales asked the board to let him keep his county car. County Administrator Alan Bruce recommended the car be assigned to an investigator, with Bales using his own car. Supervisors put off decision on this.

Camera, Fat Wallet Taken From Car

Annie L. Sweeney of 20 Chestnut Street, San Rafael, told police yesterday that someone had stolen a wallet containing $150 in cash and a $100 camera from the seat of her unlocked car while she visited with a neighbor.

Her husband, Leland W. Sweeney Jr. today offered a reward for the return of the stolen items.

Three Guns, TV Set Stolen In Sausalito

Three guns and a portable television set were reported stolen from the Edward Mow residence, 480 Sausalito Boulevard, Sausalito, early today by the victim.

Mow told Sausalito police a shotgun, rifle and pistol were taken by burglars sometime last night.

Camera Stolen

A motion picture projector, camera and film were reported stolen by Richard J. Minehan from his home at 919 Scott Street, Apt. 2, Novato, between 7 a.m. and 6 p.m. yesterday. He reported the burglary to Novato police shortly after he discovered the equipment was missing.

Supervisors Unhappy On Airport Plan

The Marin County Board of Supervisors expressed concern and some unhappiness yesterday over proposed improvements of Novato Airport, then continued its budget discussion on the airport until 8 p.m. Thursday.

The unhappiness was prompted mostly by the report that the City of Novato has filed application to annex the airport. This would deny the county any sales tax revenue and other subventions that might acrue from increased airport usage.

Supervisor Ernest N. Kettenhofen said he found it "discouraging and demoralizing."

Supervisor William A. Gnoss of Novato, long a strong advocate of the airport project, was unhappy when Novato City Mgr. J. Julien Baget told him the city also intended to annex the new McGraw-Hill Publishing Co. property north of Novato.

"Here the county has done all the work on engineering and so on—" he shrugged.

Richard Nave, president of the Novato Chamber of Commerce, and Eugene R. Trombley, chairman of the Marin County Airport Advisory Committee, spoke strongly in favor of improvements at the county airport at Novato. They said the proposal for a parallel public strip next to Hamilton Air Force Base was not new and had been investigated for four years. The Air Force and Department of Defense have said no repeatedly, Nave said.

The suggestion was put forth by the San Rafael Chamber of Commerce, with the argument that the original requests had not been well presented and that the concepts of military aircraft are lessening the importance of the Air Force base.

Fred C. Robbins of San Rafael said the radar station above Santa Venetia will be phased out in two years and this seems to indicate less use of Hamilton.

There was no one present from the San Rafael Chamber of Commerce.

Gnoss attacked the San Rafael proposal as a last-minute attempt to block a decision.

"In my mind what is blocking things here is the annexation by the City of Novato," Kettenhofen said.

Administrator Alan Bruce reported the county has a reserve of $72,819 and he is proposing another allocation of $97,800 for county airport. Bruce suggested Novato should participate on a 50-50 basis.

Proposed improvements include purchase of more land and construction of a longer strip, and addition of taxiing strips and aprons.

geles County's 12 districts.

The committee slightly altered the Allen-proposed district lines in Orange county's two senate districts—to give Assemblyman William E. Dannemeyer, D-Fullerton, a chance to run in that county's southern district.

It also shifted San Francisco's two districts slightly under a compromise suggesed by Assemblyman Milton A. Marks, R-San Francisco. The effect was to place Marks and assemblymen John L. Burton and Willie L. Brown in a non-incumbent district.

But it rejected flatly a demand from Sen. Thomas M. Rees, D-Los Angeles, that the committee adopt his original districting plan for Los Angeles County and toss out the Allen proposal. Rees had roundly denounced Allen for "crass political gerrymandering" in the state's most populous county.

Colonel Falls To Death From 60-Foot Cliff

An Army officer fell to his reath from a 60-foot cliff in the Fort Cronkite area yesterday afternoon.

He was identified as Lt. Col. Roy L. Webb, 42, of Daly City by Army officials at the Presidio. He and his wife, Olivia, had been fishing in the Fort Cronkhite area before the accident happened, they reported.

The colonel was standing on the cliff's edge, looking at the view when he fell. Mrs. Webb was on her way to their car, the Army reported.

Three military helicopters, a Coast Guard vessel and several beach parties searched until dark but were unable to find the body.

sure and an internal feud were climaxed today by the resignation of South Viet Nam's four-month-old civilian government, which returned power to the generals.

It marked the eighth change of government in the war-torn country since strongman Pdesident Nuo Dinh Diem was overthrown and assassinated less than 20 months ago.

Prime Minister Phan Huy country since strongman President Ngo Dinh Diem was over a Cabinet shakeup, agreed to stay on in caretaker roles with other members of the government.

But the National Charter and the Legislative Council were eliminated and a highly placed source said that "at this point we are starting absolutely from scratch."

Although the situation was still fluid, Maj. Gen. Nguyen Van Thieu was serving as a spokesman for the military leaders. Thieu was deputy prime minister and defense minister in the Quat cabinet. Brig. Gen. Nguyen Cao Ky, the flamboyant commander of the Vietnamese air force, also was viewed as having a strong voice.

But there were no clues as to what form the new government would take.

Bookie Case Suspect Gets A Vacation

A 30-day vacation began today for the San Mateo County sheriff's captain who was indicted by the Federal Grand Jury for accepting protection payoffs from a bookie.

Sheriff Earl Whitmore said he would not suspend Capt. Alvin J. Prara or his salary until the actions were proved warranted by evidence produced in an independent investigation.

Among the 17 persons indicted by the jury in San Francisco were bartender Charles Michael O'Neill, 36, of 1 Stanton Way, Mill Valley. Richard Andrews, 32, of 317 Bridgeway, Sausalito, was named in the indictment as a co-conspirator but was granted immunity from prosecution.

O'Neil, a former collegiate basketball player, was said to be the assistant to the bookmaking ring's leader, Anthony (Big Tony) Ruis, 38, of South San Francisco, according to the indictment. Capt. Prara was charged with accepting $300 per month per telephone from a San Mateo County bookie who was a member of the ring.

Bad Check Suspect, 17, Is Chased

Two bank employees apprehended a bad check suspect yesterday in Mill Valley after a three-block sprint from Wells Fargo Bank at 18 Miller Avenue to a ditch at the end of Creek Lane.

Arrested was a 17-year-old Mill Valley youth, who was cited by police to juvenile hall on charges of passing $190 in stolen checks.

Police said the boy opened an account June 4, depositing checks which later were learned to have been stolen from Howard T. Blethen Jr. of 252 Esperanza Street, Tiburon. He drew three checks totaling $190 on his account.

He entered the bank yesterday to withdraw $100 from his account. Tellers and clerks recognized him, said Frederick E. Allen Jr., credit officer.

Allen told the youth he would have to check the auditor in San Francisco because there was difficulty with his account. As Allen picked up the phone, the boy ran.

Allen, with trainee Carl W. Morris, gave chase, joined by Robert Sisk, parking meter checker.

you seem to believe that the use of marijuana is not harmful to you, as you have been told that it is not a narcotic and is not addictive.

"While technically this might be true, I would like to remind you that arsenic also is not a narcotic and is not addictive—but just because it isn't habit-forming doesn't mean that arsenic can't do you great harm.

"It is up to all of us to search for more answers, both in moral and biological areas, as to your responsibilities to ourselves and others in our attitudes toward the use of marijuana or other drugs."

Huck asked the Sausalito group for help in a series of educational programs, covering both the social aspects of the narcotics problem and law enforcement policy.

The drive against narcotics needs the support and cooperation of the parents and residents, he said.

Huck noted that since the recent raids, he has gotten calls from residents asking "What's wrong with marijuana?" His reply, he said, has been that "it leads to 'hard stuff,' narcotics that ruin many lives."

Parents should know that police are not "harassing Johnny" when they pick him up after curfew associating with someone who is pushing marijuana, Huck said.

When a youth is picked up, he contended, parents often "don't have the time or the interest to come down and find out what he was doing," yet "the next day they climb all over me."

He said officers plan to keep close eye on Vina del Mark park, on persons who are suspected of being peddlers and on youths who loiter after curfew.

Huck said the present curfew ordinance "is lacking," so he has drafted a new one for proposal to the city council.

The present law prohibits youths 16 and under from loitering in public streets and alleys after 10:30 p.m. "I'm seeking to make it 10 p.m. and 18 and under," he said. "There also is a provision that if a child continuously violates the curfew, the parent is subject to fine and sentence."

A. Leonard Bjorklund of the Sausalito Chamber of Commerce said parents should be aware that if marijuana or marijuana seeds are found in a car, the car can be impounded.

"We have eight cars and one boat impounded now," Huck said.

The chief said his department would present a film, talk and displays on narcotics to any local group which requests them.

Bjorklund suggested that the transcript of testimony given by teenagers to the Marin County Grand Jury Wednesday be made public.

Music Chest Star On Radio KTIM

Theodor Uppman, Metropolitan Opera baritone, who opens the Marin Music Chest's 31st summer concert season Sunday at 3 p.m. in Forest Meadows of Dominican College, San Rafael, will be interviewed by Kitty Oppenheimer Monday on KTIM's "Marin on the Go" program, heard week-days from 10:30 to 11:30 a.m.

There are no reserved seats for the Uppman recital tomorrow. Gates of Forest Meadows open at 1:30 p.m. Parking is permitted in the Coleman School grounds directly behind Forest Meadows.

Tiny Boy Swallows Home Disinfectant

A two-year-old Sausalito boy had his stomach pumped last night at Marin General Hospital after he took several swallows of a household disinfectant.

Damon Andrews, son of Mrs. Cherie Andrews of 1739 Bridgeway, Sausalito, was taken to the hospital by the Sausalito Fire Department. He was later released.

Burglary Evidence Due Jury

A San Francisco grand jury will hear evidence Monday night linking policeman Salvatore Polani, accused of being the "brains" in the April burglary of Sally Stanford's (Mrs. Marsha Owen's) San Francisco home, with two unsolved San Francisco jewelry store burglaries.

Three wrist-watch bands and cases taken in the November 1963 burglaries were reportedly found in his police station locker after his arrest.

San Francisco Deputy District Attorney Walter Giubbini is expected to try to link Polani to the burglaries through witnesses called before the grand jury Monday night.

Marin contractor Robert Worthington, who tipped police to the Stanford home burglary, reportedly will testify that Polani approached him in Miss Stanford's Valhalla restaurant in Sausalito and offered to sell a diamond bracelet which he said was stolen.

Worthington took the bracelet for a day, telling the police officer he might have a buyer and wanted to show it to him.

He then took it to Marin County District Attorney's investigator Donald E. Midyett, who showed it to San Francisco police. After examining and photographing it, they returned it to Worthington.

Worthington gave it back to Polani, saying his prospective customer felt it wasn't worth the $1,000 asking price.

REED

tax revenues come in in late fall.

In this case, however, the district asked to borrow the money against taxes still expected in this present fiscal year, although there is not enough tax money scheduled to come this year to cover such a loan.

Pino said there is $64,000 in delinquent unpaid taxes, of which the district could expect to get $25,000. This is not enough, of course, to cover the requested loan.

By law, the county can lend money only on anticipated tax revenues, not on other state or federal funds, so county officials in effect gave Reid a polite "no" and asked them to date the loan July 1.

Pino replied that he could "not understand" Mitchell's charges. He said the district went through the same procedure last year. Last year's request for a $250,000 loan could not be covered in that fiscal year's taxes either, he said, but was put forward just as he has asked this loan to be.

Pino said the district's high tax delinquency rate had contributed to the problem. The 8.35 per cent rate in the district is the highest in Marin.

The district budget is based on a 96 to 98 per cent payment of taxes, Pino said, although the recommended figure is 90 per cent.

"This (year's loan request) in no way means that the current budget will not have sufficient total income to meet all current year obligations. It only means that the cash on hand is not sufficient to cover these obligations," Pino said.

According to Pino's figures, the district has $120,000 cash on hand, $44,406 in accounts receivable and another $18,500 in expected income for a total of $182,906 in this fiscal year. Outstanding bills and salaries to be paid in the fiscal year total $174,123, he said.

Ethnic Problems On Sausalito List

Wilson C. Riles, head of the state Commission on Equal Opportunities in Education, will attend Monday's 8 p.m. meeting of the Sausalito School District board and will answer questions on a report his commission made on ethnic problems in the Sausalito district.

The board will also consider adoption of a school discipline policy and act on renewal of classified (non-teaching) employees.

Mrs. Sarah Bullock, 75, Succumbs

Mrs. Sarah Bullock, 75, of 16 Echo Place, San Rafael, died yesterday in a local hospital after a long illness.

She was a native of Salt Lake City, Utah, and lived in California and Marin County about 25 years.

Surviving are two daughters, Mrs. William Beaver of San Rafael and Mrs. Alicia Beaver of San Francisco; a son, Keith Bullock of San Anselmo and three grandchildren.

Funeral service and burial are pending in Salt Lake City.

MRS. CONLEY

Mrs. Louise Conley, 67, of Petaluma, mother of C. Bennett Young of Novato and Robert K. Young of San Rafael and sister of Mrs. Helen McCord of Novato, died yesterday in Petaluma after a short illness.

A native of Idaho, she came to Petaluma in 1938. Since then she had worked as secretary for the Petaluma Chamber of Commerce, and, until two years ago, as secretary for the Petaluma Boys Club.

She also was active in the Church of Christ, Scientist.

Surviving are her husband, John B. Conley of Petaluma, her sons, two sisters, Mrs. McCord and Dorothy Maddocks of Modesto, and five grandchildren.

Funeral will be held at 2:30 p.m. Monday at the Parent Funeral Chapel, 216 Washington Street, Petaluma. Burial will be in Cypress Hill Memorial Park, Petaluma.

CHARLES SMIT

Charles B. Smit, 81, of 186 Meernaa Avenue, Fairfax, died yesterday in a local hospital after a sudden illness.

Coroner Frank J. Keaton said Smit was found lying on a couch in his garage yesterday morning after his wife, Lina, called him for breakfast when he finished washing the car.

He was rushed to Marin General Hospital for treatment. He died nearly four hours later at 1:15 p.m.

Autopsy was scheduled at the Chapel of the Hills, San Anselmo. Funeral service is pending at Keaton's Mortuary, San Rafael.

Two Scholarships Won By Marinite

Marty S. Mancebo, son of Mr. and Mrs. Milton F. Mancebo of 11 Plymouth Avenue, Mill Valley, has received two four year, renewable scholarships, one a state scholarship to the college of his choice and the other to St. Mary's College at Moraga.

He has also received a letter of commendation from the national merit scholarship program for outstanding academic performance. Mancebo, a senior at Marin Catholic High School, is an honor roll student.

W. B. ROBBINS

Private funeral for Walter A. Robbins, 82, of San Mateo, father of Whitney B. Robbins of Mill Valley, was held yesterday in Mountain View.

Robbins died Thursday in a Burlingame hospital after a short illness.

A native of Wisconsin, he came to California by way of Idaho, living in Mill Valley about five years in the late 1920s. He had lived on the San Francisco Peninsula since then.

He retired as a salesman for a leather company about seven years ago.

Surviving are his son, a daughter, Mrs. William A. McAffe of New York City, four grandchildren and one great-grandchild.

Burial will be in LaCross, Wis.

Underline, Finish Edges Of Seams

By EUNICE FARMER

Mrs. Henry Stewart, Fort Worth, Tex., says:

I underline and finish the edges of the seams before beginning construction. You can save time by placing the lining under your garment fabric. Carefully baste through the center to prevent slipping (also through the center of all darts).

After basting around the outer edges, being sure to ease the lining slightly to avoid making it smaller than your garment section, use the zigzag stitch and go over the edges of all seams. This will prevent raveling during construction and save seam finishing later.

For sharing this advice, Mrs. Stewart is being awarded this week's tailor trix pressing board award.

I once heard that dress designers hate women. I'm convinced they do or they wouldn't design so many of those straight dresses that don't look good on any woman past 20 years. If the good Lord meant for us to look like men, He would have made us all alike. Does everyone feel the way I do about these styles, or must we all get used to wearing them just because some man says we should? Would-Be-Seamstress

Dear Would-Be:

It often is difficult to accept new styles. We all seem to rebel a little at first. Regardless of how much we may have thought we liked the styles at one time, looking back over family photos usually brings some laughs. That's because we do get used to "current" styles.

Funny, the shift look was rejected firmly about 7 years ago and yet today we have the very same styles and they are accepted. What are your opinions—do you or don't you like them? Does your husband prefer the straight dresses to the fitted ones? It would be interesting to find out.

Why not jot off a few words to me and let me know your personal ideas, and I'll let you know the outcome. Send your letters and cards to Sew simple, in care of this paper.

My newest pattern has me completely baffled, the neckline is cut for a normal 12-year-old girl and look at the neck, it wouldn't fit a doll. Why do they do it? Mrs. D.D.

Dear Mrs. D.D.:

So happy you enclosed the piece of pattern so I could check into it. The pattern you have selected has a neck ruffle and this is the piece you sent. It is cut much smaller than the actual neckline of the dress because that is the only way it will fall into a soft ruffle. If it were cut the same size as the dress, it would lay flat like the facing.

In applying the ruffle, machine stitch on the seamline at the neck edge. Clip the seam allowance about every inch clear down to the stitching line. This will release enough fabric so that it can be stretched enough to fit the neckline. Some ruffles are faced and you have a finished outer edge, others are merely hemmed. I have seen a few that are pulled at the edge to resemble an uneven fringe. The neckline treatment of all of these must be treated the same.

Why does madras fabric have to bleed? Seems that bleeding madras is the only acceptable kind these days and it gives me a great deal of extra work washing it by hand. Mrs. J.K.

Dear Mrs. J.K.:

I'm with you on this, all four of my children and my husband have shirts, shorts, dresses and you name it out of madras that bleeds. Our bathroom looks like the "dark ages" with all the laundry that had to be washed by hand hanging up to dry. Between drip-dry clothes and those that aren't color-fast, it seems we have taken a step backward.

The authentic madras from India is dyed with vegetable dye and when it is washed one color blends into the next one which is supposed to have an interesting effect. Our own domestic copies are color fast. Take your pick!

When we suggested lightly brushing nail polish on the seams of nylon dresses that ravel, we especially mentioned nylon because it doesn't need ironing. Please do not use nail polish to reinforce any other area of your garment that requires ironing because the results could be disastrous. My thanks to those of you who have written about unhappy experiences in using colorless nail polish.

Facing: A shaped piece of fabric used to finish the neckline, front edges, armhole or most any outer edge. A collar facing is often called undercollar.

Please send your questions and sewing tips to Sew Simple in care of the Independent-Journal.

Senior Girls Will Honor European

Mrs. Henry T. Aubel of Lucas Valley has invited about 50 graduating senior girls to tea in honor of her daughter, Judith Ann, and Brigitte Hedel, American Field Service student of Terra Linda High School, on June 19 following graduation.

Judith will enroll at the University of California at Davis in the fall, and Miss Hedel will be returning to Orleans, France in July, after the month-long bus tour for AFS visitors.

Special guests will include Mrs. Ralph Wanderer, host mother of Brigitte's for the past year, and Mrs. William Lippincott of Santa Rosa, grandmother of Judy's, and the Misses Marcella and Valerie Pryor of San Francisco, aunts of Mrs. Aubel.

Assisting at the tea table will be Mesdames William T. Lane, Norman Green, Edward Kadel and William E. Brook. Judy's sister, Pamela, will be leaving the following week for a month's stay with relatives, Mr. and Mrs. William Lippincott, Jr., of Madison, N. J., where she will attend the Fair, spend time at Lake Winnepasaki in New Hampshire, and visit in Boston and Philadelphia.

The tea will afford a gathering of graduates who will be attending a variety of colleges and universities after dispersing for the summer months, and to say farewell to Brigitte who has been a very popular Terra Linda student.

MR. AND MRS. CHARLES MACK EDWARDS

Edwards-Garris Ceremony Performed In San Rafael

Barbara Lee Garris of Mill Valley became the bride of Charles Mack Edwards of San Francisco on May 29 at Mission San Rafael Arcangel, San Rafael.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Garris of Mill Valley and the bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Charles C. Edwards of Titusville, Pa., and the late Dr. Edwards.

When the bride was given in marriage in the double ring rite performed at 2 p.m. by the Rev. Francis Scanlon, she was wearing a full length gown of white embroidered French organdy.

Jane Margaret Garris of Mill Valley served her sister as maid of honor wearing a full length gown of pink linen with satin trim. Gowned identically as bridesmaids were Mrs. Michael Burrill of Novato and Mrs. Lawrence Kane of San Francisco.

Donald S. Henderson of San Francisco was the best man, and ushers were Robert J. Foley of Mill Valley and Patrick J. Devlin of Pleasanthill.

Following the ceremony a reception was held in the garden of the bride's parents' home and the young couple left afterward for a wedding trip in Northern California. They will live in San Francisco.

Barbara was graduated from Marin Catholic High School and attended Dominican College and the University of San Francisco. She and her husband are employed in the accounting office of Standard Oil of California in San Francisco.

The bridegroom was graduated from high school in Titusville and from Waynesburg College in Waynesburg, Pa. He is the brother of Barbara Mae Edwards and Second Lt. James D. Edwards of Newfoundland.

Janice Listman Becomes Bride In Ceremony At St. Raphael's

Janice Elizabeth Listman became the bride of George Alfred Doane in a 1 p.m., ceremony on May 29 in St. Raphael's Church, San Rafael.

The Rev. Niles Riley officiated for the double ring rite.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Louis Listman of San Rafael.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a full length gown of white organza and Venetian lace. Her skirt extended into a Watteau chapel train.

Maid of honor Heather Ingerson of San Rafael preceded the bride to the altar in a full length gown of pink organza.

Ronald Whittemore of Fairfax served the bridegroom as best man and ushers were Thomas Scahill and Karl Ashley of Fairfax and the bride's brother, Jeffrey Listman of San Rafael.

A reception followed the ceremony in the Marinwood Community Center.

The bride was graduated from San Rafael High School and attended College of Marin. She is employed at Pacific Telephone in San Francisco. Mr. and Mrs. Louis Listman of Novato are her grandparents.

The bridegroom, son of Dr. and Mrs. Alfred G. Doane of San Rafael, was graduated from Terra Linda High School and attends College of Marin. He is employed with Pacific Telephone in Mill Valley.

Following a wedding trip to Carmel, the couple will reside in San Rafael.

Why Is Alcoholic Allowed To Play Highway Villain?

HIGHWAY ACCIDENT statistics indicate that the drinking driver is the most villainous actor of the drama which sees thousands upon thousands of Americans killed or maimed in automobile crashes each year.

Drinking drivers are the most common denominator among highway accident statistics.

The correlation between "one for the road" and subsequent tragedy is altogether too close.

ALCOHOLISM IS A DISEASE. This is what experts are telling us more loudly and more frequently. And they tell us that our San Francisco Bay Area has just about the densest concentration of alcoholics in the country. We have the most sufferers from this disease.

And in California we take a back seat to no one when it comes to killing and maiming record numbers on our highways.

But short of committing alcoholics to mental institutions, we have no machinery for spotting alcoholics so as to control the issuance of drivers' licenses to them.

WE DO HAVE STRINGENT processes for controlling issuance of drivers' licenses to epileptics.

The controls on epileptic drivers may be far more stringent than necessary; they well may work an undue hardship on many epileptics.

Historically, the law's attitude toward epilepsy is based more on medieval superstition than on the facts developed by modern medical science. Reform of the law has NOT kept pace with the progress of medical science.

HERE IS THE KIND OF letter you get from the California Department of Motor Vehicles if and when you become catalogued as an epileptic:

"The records of this department show that you are subject to a condition causing lapses in consciousness or control.

"Therefore, as provided for in Section . . . . of the Vehicle Code, you are hereby notified that you are placed on probation to this Department and your driving privilege shall hereafter be subject to the following terms and conditions:

" . . . You must remain under the care of your physician and follow exactly such treatment as is prescribed.

" . . . You must report in person to your physician at intervals not to exceed . . . months and on each such occasion must cause your doctor to send to this Department a report on the progress of your case.

" . . . You must advise your doctor and this Department immediately of any spells or lapses of consciousness or control that may occur subsequent to the issuance of this order . . . "

That, obviously, is a tough probation; probably too tough for those epileptics who are forewarned of impending episodes and have the good judgment to withdraw from ordinary activity until they feel up to par again.

WHAT'S TO KEEP AN epileptic from just keeping quiet about his condition and thereby avoid the stringent restrictions?

First, when he applies for a driver's license he would have to lie in answering some questions aimed at discovering his condition. Second, his doctor is required by law to report his epilepsy to the Public Health Department which, in turn, is required to report them to the Department of Motor Vehicles.

There is NO such procedure for alcoholics.

Their doctors or psychiatrists are NOT required to report them to the Health Department or anybody else.

City and county law enforcement agencies are NOT required to report recurring arrests of specified individuals for drunkenness.

Even commitment proceedings against alcoholics are NOT required to be reported to the Department of Motor Vehicles.

The Department has asked the State Legislature to institute alcoholic reporting, but the legislature has turned a deaf ear.

It doesn't make sense.

Public safety and public welfare would be better served by easing up on epileptics (who do NOT have a reputation as bad actors on our highways) and tighten up on drinking drivers who statistically cause the most grief to themselves and others.

The legislature ought to get with it.

Vacation Time

There should be a serum to protect the nerves of parents from children free for vacation. A sort of vacation vaccination.

It would be particularly useful to mothers. Much as she loves him, Little Willie underfoot all day long can be wearing.

Lots of women we know would welcome such a vaccine. Some would offer their own children to be attenuated. Or so they would have us believe.

PEACE THROUGH THE TEN COMMANDMENTS

Nearly three centuries ago, the Ten Commandments were paraphrased by an anonymous person in Lancashire, England, as follows:

1. Have no other gods but Me;
2. Unto no image bow the knee;
3. Take not the name of God in vain;
4. Do not the Sabbath day profane;
5. Honor thy father and thy mother too;
6. And see that thou no murder do;
7. From vile adultery keep thou clean;
8. And steal not, though thy state be mean;
9. Bear not false witness—shun that blot;
10. What is thy neighbor's covet not.

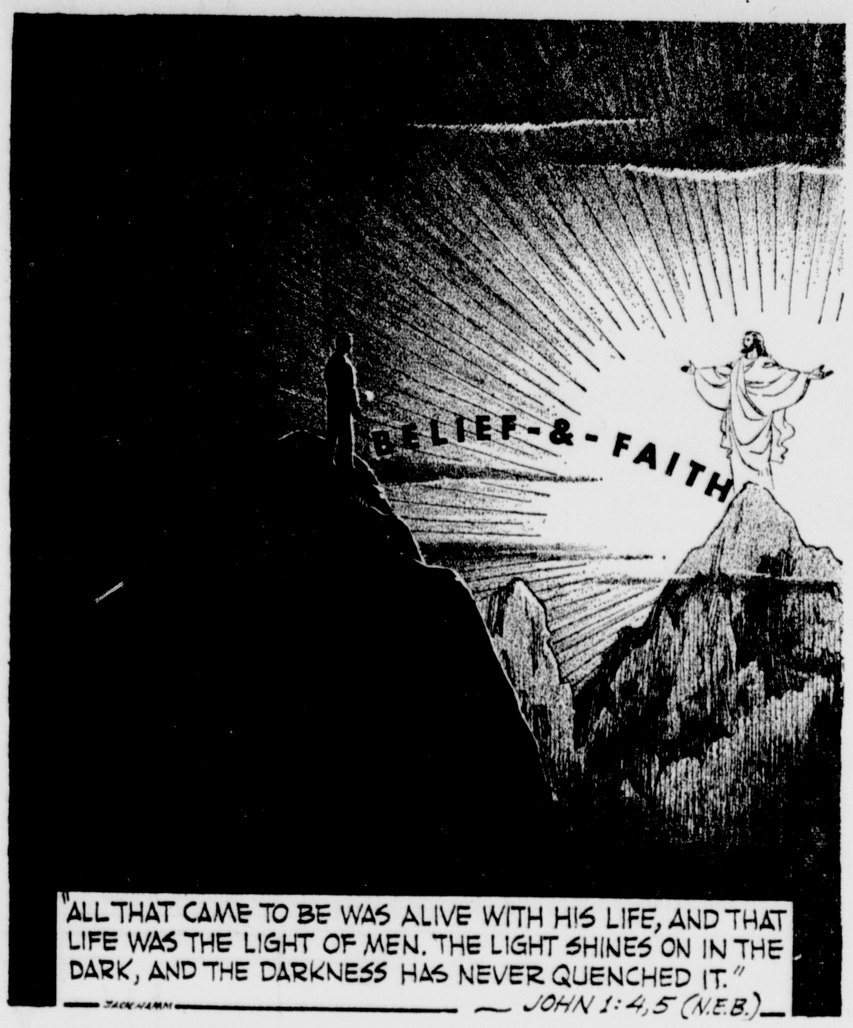

Through the ages peace and order have prevailed in the world in more or less the same proportion as men have based their thoughts, words and deed on the divine standards of the Decalogue.

Do what you can to promote a knowledge and observance of the Ten Commandments, as well as live up to them conscientiously yourself.

"All that the Lord has said, we will heed and do." (Exodus 24:7)

Thanks to You, O Father, for the guidance and support of Your eternal law.

School Bus Operation Held Short-Sighted

Editor, Independent-Journal:

The Mill Valley School Board meeting . . . June 7, I consider to be a tragic waste of time and energy. The primary objective of our school board has been and always will be the maintaining of high scholastic standards. Because of . . . this . . . we have never questioned too seriously the need to bus students within the Mill Valley School District. Why should their motives suddenly be questioned in connection with the bussing of students to Richardson Bay School? Perhaps the motives of those who are questioning should be examined more closely. If . . . our school board is able to contribute toward the alleviation of racial imbalance, . . . proven to be intrinsically related to educational standards, in Mill Valley as well as Sausalito, then we simply should be doubly or triply proud of their achievements.

Let's hope that the Mill Valley School Board will not be intimidated by those few who would stand in the way of progress, feeling somehow . . . they are protecting the interests of their children. If these unenlightened few could only use a bit more foresight they would see the tremendous problems they are helping to create, . . . which their children, . . . so carefully protected from the realities of life, will have to cope with.

Firearms Cartoon Draws A Criticism

Editor, Independent-Journal:

. . . the right of the people to keep and bear arms shall not be infringed.

I protest most strongly Paul Miller's cartoon of June 4. It presents a distorted picture of those citizens fighting firearms legislation. . . .

Instead of restricting the honest citizen's right to keep and bear arms as provided under the Second and Fourth Amendments of the Constitution, let us instead provide severe and mandatory punishment for those who violate the laws with firearms.

A minimum sentence of 25 years without parole for commission of an armed crime; and the gas chamber if such crime results in the death of another. . . .

. . . When Hitler first came to power, one of the first acts . . . was to restrict the ownership of firearms. As a Jewish friend of mine who fled Germany in the 30s commented, "When guns become illegal, that's the time to get one; and if you can't get one, RUN."

People who fear guns are ignorant of them, for fear is ignorance, and it is very difficult to outlaw either.

Supervisor Views Civic Center Bonds

Editor, Independent-Journal:

We tried to run our Civic Center bond campaign as a public information program designed to bring before every responsible group in the county the facts surrounding our complex problem, to give them the same frame of reference which faced us as supervisors in making our decision.

I think our success was due to the efforts of men like Fred Enemark and other leaders in the business community, who were able to get public acceptance, as well as understanding of our problem.

The county owes a great deal to men like Fred, who take the time out of their business and personal lives to make things go. The rewards for doing this are virually non-existent; and, if anything, they get penalized in loss of time and loss of income which that time would have produced. Men like Fred assume responsibility for most of the good things that happen here. And without them, the county would be a poorer place for all of us.

Mrs. Livermore's role over the years, just as in this campaign, speaks and has spoken for itself. Our campaign director, Tom Page, another Marinite, worked long and hard to get the campaign rolling to its successful end.

And your paper played a role of responsible journalism at its best. Without the coverage you gave us, and without the editorial support we received, it is obvious we would not have achieved victory.

Library Unification 'One Of The Nicest'

Editor, Independent-Journal:

One of the nicest, most peaceful, and fruitful unifications that has taken place in this county is in the library area. Every small library in the county, except San Anselmo, has joined the county system, and now that the magnificent Mill Valley Library has also joined, the available book pool is wonderful. All these libraries, and a number of others in North Bay counties, have an inter-library teletype system which makes inter-library loans and book searches rapid and easy. Also, it enables each library to specialize—one buys all the art books, another books about nature, another historical works.

Mill Valley admits San Anselmo borrowers even though we aren't quite legal, so we, too, have real library service within a few miles.

Co-chairman Thanks I-J For Coverage

Editor, Independent-Journal:

On behalf of the Board of Supervisors, Mrs. Livermore and myself, I would like to thank you for the excellent coverage which you gave to the Proposition "A" campaign.

The support of the Independent-Journal was a key element in the victory we achieved.

We can all take pride in the results of the election and we can look forward to developing a Civic Center which will become even more world-famous.

Foreign Affairs Inexperience Poses Questions About Johnson

WASHINGTON (AP) — At one time the direction of the Johnson administration seemed clear but it is complex now and the question can fairly be asked: Where are we going?

THE CLEAR PART was in the administration's heavy concentration on home problems. But suddenly, and with increasing intensity as time passes, the administration spread its attention to foreign affairs.

And the deeper the United States gets involved in the war in Viet Nam—to take one example—the more complex the future looks.

For more than a year after he succeeded the assassinated President John F. Kennedy in November, 1963, President Lyndon B. Johnson put almost all his attention on the field where he was expert, domestic doings and dealings with Congress.

He did extremely well and under his prodding Congress made remarkable progress. If Johnson had been able to occupy himself this well until the end of his elected term, the final judgment on his record appeared certain to be excellent.

But within a month after taking office on his own last January, Johnson plunged into the foreign field, where his experience was limited and his ability never proven because it was never tested.

He moved in a big way, ordering the bombing of North Viet Nam, an order still being carried out although the North Vietnamese have not visibly budged an inch.

IRONICALLY, unless there is a quick solution in Asia, where none is in sight, the final judgment on the success or failure or wisdom of the Johnson administration may have to be made in this field least familiar to it, foreign problems.

At this minute, no one outside the administration, and perhaps no one inside it, can say whether the United States is going to get into a big land war in Asia.

Adding to the uncertainty is the way in which American involvement is being stepped up until what looked once like a limited role for American forces now seems much less limited.

Does Johnson have thought-out plans for each step the United States intends to take in Viet Nam or are those steps more the product of events than of planning?

FOR INSTANCE, last March, when Marines were sent into Viet Nam, the U. S. Defense Department said the South Vietnamese government asked for them to guard the air base at Da Nang and gave this official explanation:

"The limited mission of the Marines will be to relieve the government of South Viet Nam forces now engaged in security duty for action in the pacific-action programs and in offensive roles against Communist guerillas."

That made it seem the Americans would sit tight, doing guard duty, while the Vietnamese did the fighting. There were 27,000 troops and Marines in Viet Nam in March. Gradually the number was increased until now there are 54,000.

And now the Americans' role seems a lot less limited. Last Friday a military spokesman in Saigon said these U. S. forces had a dual role: Of defense and taking part in battle in support of Vietnamese forces when help is asked.

A State Department spokesman indicated the same thing Tuesday, which seemed to be putting U. S. forces far deeper into war. And Wednesday a White House spokesman said that, while the Americans are in Viet Nam to guard important bases, they can be used in combat to help the Vietnamese under certain circumstances.

SO GRADUALLY American involvement has increased. There was a similar step-up in explanations when Johnson sent troops into the Dominican Republic.

There is another uncertainty about Johnson's future foreign policy. Will he be as quick to use American armed force in other situations which may arise in these next four years as he was in Viet Nam and the Dominican Republic?

BARKER ON CHINA

Peking Lords Exhort People: 'Think War'

By GEORGE BARKER

WITH WAR being waged just beyond its border on the land of its close ally, Peking is preparing for the possibility of bombing and even invasion by American forces. Although China's information about U.S. intentions may be faulty, it cannot be denied the present dangerous escalation may, against the will of all, reach the point of no return on the road to war between the United States and China.

It is only natural that Peking should prepare for any eventuality. They have, of course, imposed a veil of secrecy over their military plans and organization, but from studies of the Mainland press made in Hong Kong certain things cannot be hidden. It is evident that a slow, gradual preparation for emergency is taking place.

Even before the Communist takeover in 1949, Chinese society was on a military footing. It has been continuous since. Security measures and the screening of individuals are now being carried out with even greater care. The armed forces are being kept under strict political control, as are industries and all sectors of the economy. Food is rationed and the spreading of rumors is severely punished. Thought control is tighter than ever and every potential enemy is closely watched. The country's youth is being trained to endure hardship by living in the most primitive villages and sharing in the manual labor.

THE PEOPLE are exhorted to be prepared for any eventuality. Marshal Lin Piao said, "One cannot foresee the time and place of the enemy's attack. The enemy attacks where and when people think he will not attack." The terms of compulsory military service have been extended.

Youth, even kindergarten children, are being mobilized. The youngest are taught songs glorifying Mao, and play games and recite poems about killing the "American imperialists." This type of training is being extended to all children. The power given to these immature children to intimidate and inform on their elders must bring spine-chilling memories of the excesses of the land reform program.

The new slogan is "all are soldiers." Everywhere youngsters are being taught gunnery, bayonet practice, swimming in icy water, the arts of self-defense, military science and in general preparting for a last-ditch defense of the Fatherland against the Americans.

The Mao regime has always used hatred and fear to drive its people to greater effort. Perhaps the people are becoming blase and this is the method of giving them a new injection of energy. However, this appears to be real.

MARSHAL LIN PIAO spoke of possible war with the U. S. as a "disaster" for which the Chinese must prepare. I think it was an interesting choice of words for a military man. It would be a disastrous, senseless war which would solve nothing.

The Country Parson

"There seems to be no profit in the ministry — and sometimes, no prophet."

South American Countries Simmer

By PAUL SANDERS
Associated Press

Latin America's chronic unrest, which exploded into violent revolution in the Dominican Republic, is threatening upheaval in other countries.

The unrest is compounded by this mixture:

The slow progress of economic and social reforms.

Nationalistic tendencies of university students and a growing middle class.

Inflation.

Progress in education, which makes more people aspire to a better life.

An influx of peasants into cities where, jobless, they congregate in miserable shantytowns.

Problems seem most acute in these nations:

Colombia—A wave of student and labor riots was crushed recently by the army and President Guillermo Leon Valencia declared a state of siege, a modified form of marital law. Discontent over slow progress in reforms sparked the riots. The country also has been plagued by outbursts of banditry and kidnapping. International communism has proclaimed Colombia, along with Venezuela, its principal target in Latin America.

Bolivia — The government's crackdown on Marxist leaders of the tin miners' union led to virtual civil war in which miners opposed army troops. The basic problem here is the nationalized tin mines, losing a half-million dollars a day because they are heavily overstaffed.

Haiti—Sharing the island of Hispaniola with the Dominican Republic, the little Negro nation is kept in subjugation by the iron rule of Dictator Francois Duvalier. An explosion here is certain, sooner or later.

Uruguay—Long regarded as a model democracy, the little nation has been plagued by inflation, unemployment and scandalous bank failures. Reports that the military were planning a coup were discounted by the ruling government council but an upset of some kind seemed not unlikely.

Ecuador—The ruling military junto sent the army to suppress a general strike in the big port city of Guayaquil. This was called by businessmen and labor unions to protest higher customs duties on luxury imports. The trouble pointed up the persistent conflict between Guayaquil and the rulers in Quito. Guayaquil businessmen have resisted Quito's reform projects if they touch Guayaquil's interests. A renewal of this conflict is certain.

Venezuela — The Communist-led National Liberation Front (FLN) failed in attempts to overthrow President Romulo Betancourt and his successor by terrorism and its campaign subsided. But the FLN has pledged a new attempt at revolution at the first opportunity.

Argentina—The nation is beset by inflation and government financial problems, the lingering problems of Peronism and a controversy over whether or not to send troops to the Dominican Republic as part of the Inter American force.

When To Release Reservoir Water Proves To Be Problem

SACRAMENTO (CNS) — The U.S. Bureau of Reclamation has announced a schedule for maintenance of the water level at Black Butte reservoir, on Stony Creek in Glenn and Tehama counties, to provide a maximum amount of water for irrigation and also a maximum possible level for recreation purposes.

The reservoir has a capacity of about 160,000 acre feet, with a minimum pool requirement of 10,000 acre feet. However, most of the 150,000 acre feet capacity above the minimum pool must be kept available to store water during winter months for flood control purposes.

If releases of water were delayed until fall, to permit a maximum level for recreation, the peak of the irrigation season would have passed and the water would flow unused into the Sacramento River and waste into the ocean.

"In order to get the greatest possible use out of this water for the most people, we have decided to start our releases in July," E. F. Sullivan, assistant regional director of the bureau of reclamation Region 2, announced.

"This will assure the recreationists that the lake will be at the maximum level possible over the busy Fourth of July weekend and of a useable lake through the Labor Day weekend," he said. "A substantial pool will still be available — about 20 feet higher and twice as large as the minimum pool —during the first week in September.

Thus no more water will be released until the first week in July, except for the water normally passing through the dam from Stony Creek, for delivery to the Orland project.

Legislature's Imperfections Do Stand Out

SACRAMENTO (CNS) — A weekly television series about a state legislature gets under way with each episode with the pronouncement that, while democracy may be far from perfect, it's still far ahead of any other system of government.

Viewing the Sacramento scene, as the California legislature heads toward its adjournment on June 18, the imperfections stand out at times.

The lawmakers convened in the capitol on Jan. 4 to begin the business of introducing bills. The sheer volume of pieces of legislation introduced makes this no small task.

This year, a total of 5021 bills were introduced, along with 139 proposed amendments to the constitution, and 347 resolutions which require action by both houses. In addition, 834 one-house resolutions were thrown into the hopper.

The first month of the meeting and much of the second was confined entirely to bill introduction, because of the constitutional limitations that no bill can be heard in less than 30 days after its introduction.

So the lawmakers get into the habit of meeting only Monday through Thursday, with actually only minimum sessions on Monday and Thursday. Even when the committees get into full swing this short week continues.

After Easter, the legislature gave up its four-day week and, by the time Memorial Day rolled around, the senate met on both the Saturday before and the Monday legal holiday after Memorial Day.

The senate held some marathon sessions recently as it passed the deadline for acting on its own bills—during the final 14 days of a session, the senate may act only upon bills from the assembly.

The assembly's deadline for acting on its own bills fell on June 8, 10 days before the session ending. In the final two days before that deadline, the lower house had more than 500 bills to act upon.

Of necessity, this results in one of two things—many bills are approved hastily, with few members having the faintest idea of what they're all about; or many bills are lost in the legislative shuffle.

Thus the question arises again, as it does each year: why doesn't the legislature pursue its duties a bit more diligently during March, April and the early part of May in order to avoid the hectic stretch run? It is a question often asked but, so far, never answered.

ONE TIME MAYOR

Christopher Contender In Governor Election

By EDWIN S. CAPPS

SACREMENTO (CNS) — Another serious contender for the Republican nomination for governor next year has called in Sacramento to pay his respects and exchange pleasantries with GOP members of the legislature.

This is George Christopher, former San Francisco mayor and member of the board of supervisors.

Christopher said he would be a candidate next year unless unforseen events develop, which is about as definite as a person can get, considering even the primary election is a year away.

It would be Christopher's first outing in statewide politics since 1958 when he was defeated by Gov. Goodwin J. Knight in a bid for nomination to the U.S. Senate.

Knight later fell to defeat himself in what generally has been considered the most disastrous election year the Republicans ever experienced in California.

Christopher said reliable polls show he and Sen. Thomas H. Kuchel, R-Calif., are the only two of the mentioned Republican hopefuls in the gubernatorial race who could beat Gov. Edmund G. Brown.

Following the rare code of behavior which most Republicans now are obeying, Christopher declined to comment on others mentioned as possibilities to run for governor next year.

His Sacramento appearance came only a day after Rep. Alphonzo Bell, R-Los Angeles, announced he would be happy to be a compromise candidate for governor — presumably a compromise between such conservative candidate possibilities as Ronald Reagan and Joe Shell, and the more moderate ones like Kuchel, former Governor Knight, and Christopher.

Christopher noted a lot of people, including himself, might like to look upon themselves as compromise candidates.

The former San Francisco mayor said Republicans in California are getting tired of winning primary elections among themselves and then losing out in the main event in November.

But despite the harmony pact adopted by top GOP's, under which they are to concentrate on critizing Democrats instead of members of their own party, it's extremely doubtful that all could be settled in a smoke-filled room and a single candidate emerge next spring with the full backing of the party.

There is still the big unanswered question in California politics as to whether the Republican party should go with a candidate that offers a chance or a choice.

In 1958, former Sen. William F. Knowland certainly offered the voters a choice of government between himself and Governor Brown. But the voters chose Brown.

In 1962, former Vice President Richard M. Nixon was considered the Republican with the most "chance" to win. Throughout his campaign, Nixon failed to offer any sweeping proposals for government that might offer the voters much of a choice. And, under those circumstances, Brown again won an impressive victory.

With these campaigns behind them, it's little wonder the GOP leadership should harbor some uncertainties whether it should go with a so-called conservative or so-called moderate candidate.

At this point, it might appear that Governor's popularity with the voters is at about as low an ebb as anytime since 1958.

But Republicans will remember that Brown's status has been low before and he has shown an ability to spring back.

In those former low periods, however, Brown's lack of popularity was largely the result of his own doings.

In the present situation, Brown's position is complicated by challenges from others within the party who may not be so quick to lend their weight to help rescue the governor as they have in the past.

GEORGE CHRISTOPHER
Will he oppose Brown?

COSTLY INFERNO — When Egyptian rioters, protesting United Nations use of United States aircraft to fly mercenaries into The Congo rebels' area, put the John F. Kennedy Memorial Library in Cairo to the torch, pacts pledging half a million dollars in aid to various U.S.-Egyptian programs were threatened. (UPI Telephoto)

Egyptians May Have Put Torch To More Than Kennedy Library

By RAY MOSELEY

CAIRO (UPI)—On the night last November when a mob burned down the John F. Kennedy Library here, an American diplomat said in a telephone conversation with an Egyptian government official:

"This may well prove to be a $500 million fire."

What he meant was that Egypt might lose its aid from the United States because of the attack on American property.

Egyptian officials are now deeply worried that the diplomay may have been right. American aid is trickling out, Egypt's wheat supplies are believed to be desperately low and so far there has been no indication from Washington whether the aid agreement which expires June 30 will be renewed.

(The foreign aid bill passed by the House forbids sales of surplus farm commodities to the U.A.R. unless the President deems such sales "essential to the national security." The House also adopted a "sense of Congress" amendment opposing sales of wheat to the countries that permit mob destruction of U.S. libraries, embassies and other facilities. The amendment, incorporated in the Senate bill, is not binding on the President.)

If the aid is cut off, economic observers believe this will deal a severe blow to President Gamal Abdel Nasser's long-range plans to give his countrymen a decent standard of living.

Senior American diplomats here also fear that loss of U.S. aid would provoke Nasser to stir up trouble for the United States throughout the Middle East, possibly drive him into closer alliance with the Communist bloc and destroy the American position here which appears to have improved considerably since the low - water mark represented by the library burning.

On the other hand, some debaters on the diplomatic cocktail circuit hold that "Nasser has it coming" and that only by halting aid to him can the United States show other nations receiving its help that good relations are a two - way street.

The downturn in Egyptian-American relations began last summer when Nasser installed Communists in key positions in the Egyptian press and the press launched a virulent, Marxist - oriented campaign against the United States.

The next episode was the American-Belgian air drop to rescue hostages held by the Congolese rebels at Stanleyville — an action bitterly resented by Egyptian officials who favored the rebel movement.

The attack on the U. S. library was staged to protest the Stanleyville operation. American officials are convinced the demonstration was carried out with the foreknowledge and approval of the Egyptian government. They believe, however, that the government did not anticipate or approve the burning of the library.

Egyptian sources privately contend that Communists among the demonstrators were responsible for burning the building.

Shortly after the library fire, Nasser made a speech inviting the United States to "go drink sea water" — an Arabic equivalent of "go jump in the lake" — and attacking Ambassador Lucius D. Battle personally.

What galled American officials most about this performance was that a Soviet deputy premier was sharing the speakers' platform with Nasser. They suspected the attack on the United States was made as a favor to the Soviet Union as much as anything else.

In this same period, Nasser's jets shot down an American private plane and Nasser began sending Soviet arms to the Congo rebels.

In the five months since then, however, Egyptian-American relations appear to have improved.

This has persuaded many American officials that U. S. influence in Egypt remains stronger than critics of U. S. policy toward this country generally assume, and that Nasser —despite frequent policy differences with the United States — is no implacable foe of America.

If aid is cut off, Egypt will have to make up the loss by buying food abroad with hard currencies. This means that some of the funds allocated for construction of factories under Egypt's new seven-year plan will have to be diverted to food purchases instead.

The factories will not be built, and jobs will not be found for many in Egypt's rapidly growing population.

This is why Egyptian officials are worried. They are now telling their people that they must be prepared to make sacrifices if the aid is cut off —thus bringing home to the masses the importance to Egypt of a program that they have belittled publicly in the past.

Space Feat Is Giant Stride

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Who says you can't get anywhere going around in circles?

Two American astronauts who splashed down into the Atlantic in their Gemini-4 space capsule proved otherwise.

Their feat helped America take a giant stride toward the landing of a man on the moon possibly in the next decade.

They proved man can work in space in cramped conditions without physical deterioration.

They demonstrated the feasibility of an astronaut maneuvering outside the space capsule with the aid of a jet-gun.

And they narrowed if not eliminated entirely the so-called space gap between the United States and the Soviet Union.

The men, Maj. James McDivitt and Maj. Edward White had completed 62 orbits around the earth in a space journey of 1.7 million miles when they brought their space vehicle down into the ocean after a fiery re-entry into the earth's atmosphere.

Later in the week the men returned to the manned spacecraft center near Houston for a reunion with their families and ordeal of press conferences and ceremonies in their honor.

President Johnson hailed the two men for their "modesty and humility," and flew to the two men to promote the heroes of America's latest space spectacular to lieutenant colonels.

A visual dividend for Americans was a fascinating color movie of White's walk in space. The intrepid astronaut was seen cavorting in the cosmos against breath-taking background of a blue earth and black sky.

Around The World Around The Clock:

Houston — President Johnson offered to share America's space knowledge with the world in the cause of peace. All that this country has accomplished and will accomplish in the future, "we stand ready to share for the benefit of all mankind," the president said.

Saigon—The military took power in South Viet Nam after announcing it no longer had confidence in the civilian leadership. There was confusion as to whether power would be in the hands of a single strong-man, a military junta or a combined military civilian council. In hard ground fighting, U.S. forces, South Vietnamese and the rebel Viet Cong suffered more than 1,000 casualties.

Washington — Ambassador to South Viet Nam Maxwell D. Taylor predicted "some hard fighting" ahead in Viet Nam.

Washington — A State Department spokesman said that authorization for American field commanders to use U.S. troops against Viet Cong guerrillas when asked for by the South Vietnamese was no change from previous policy.

Kansas City—Duane Earl Pope, the college athlete accused of killing three persons in a bank holdup, surrendered meekly to police.

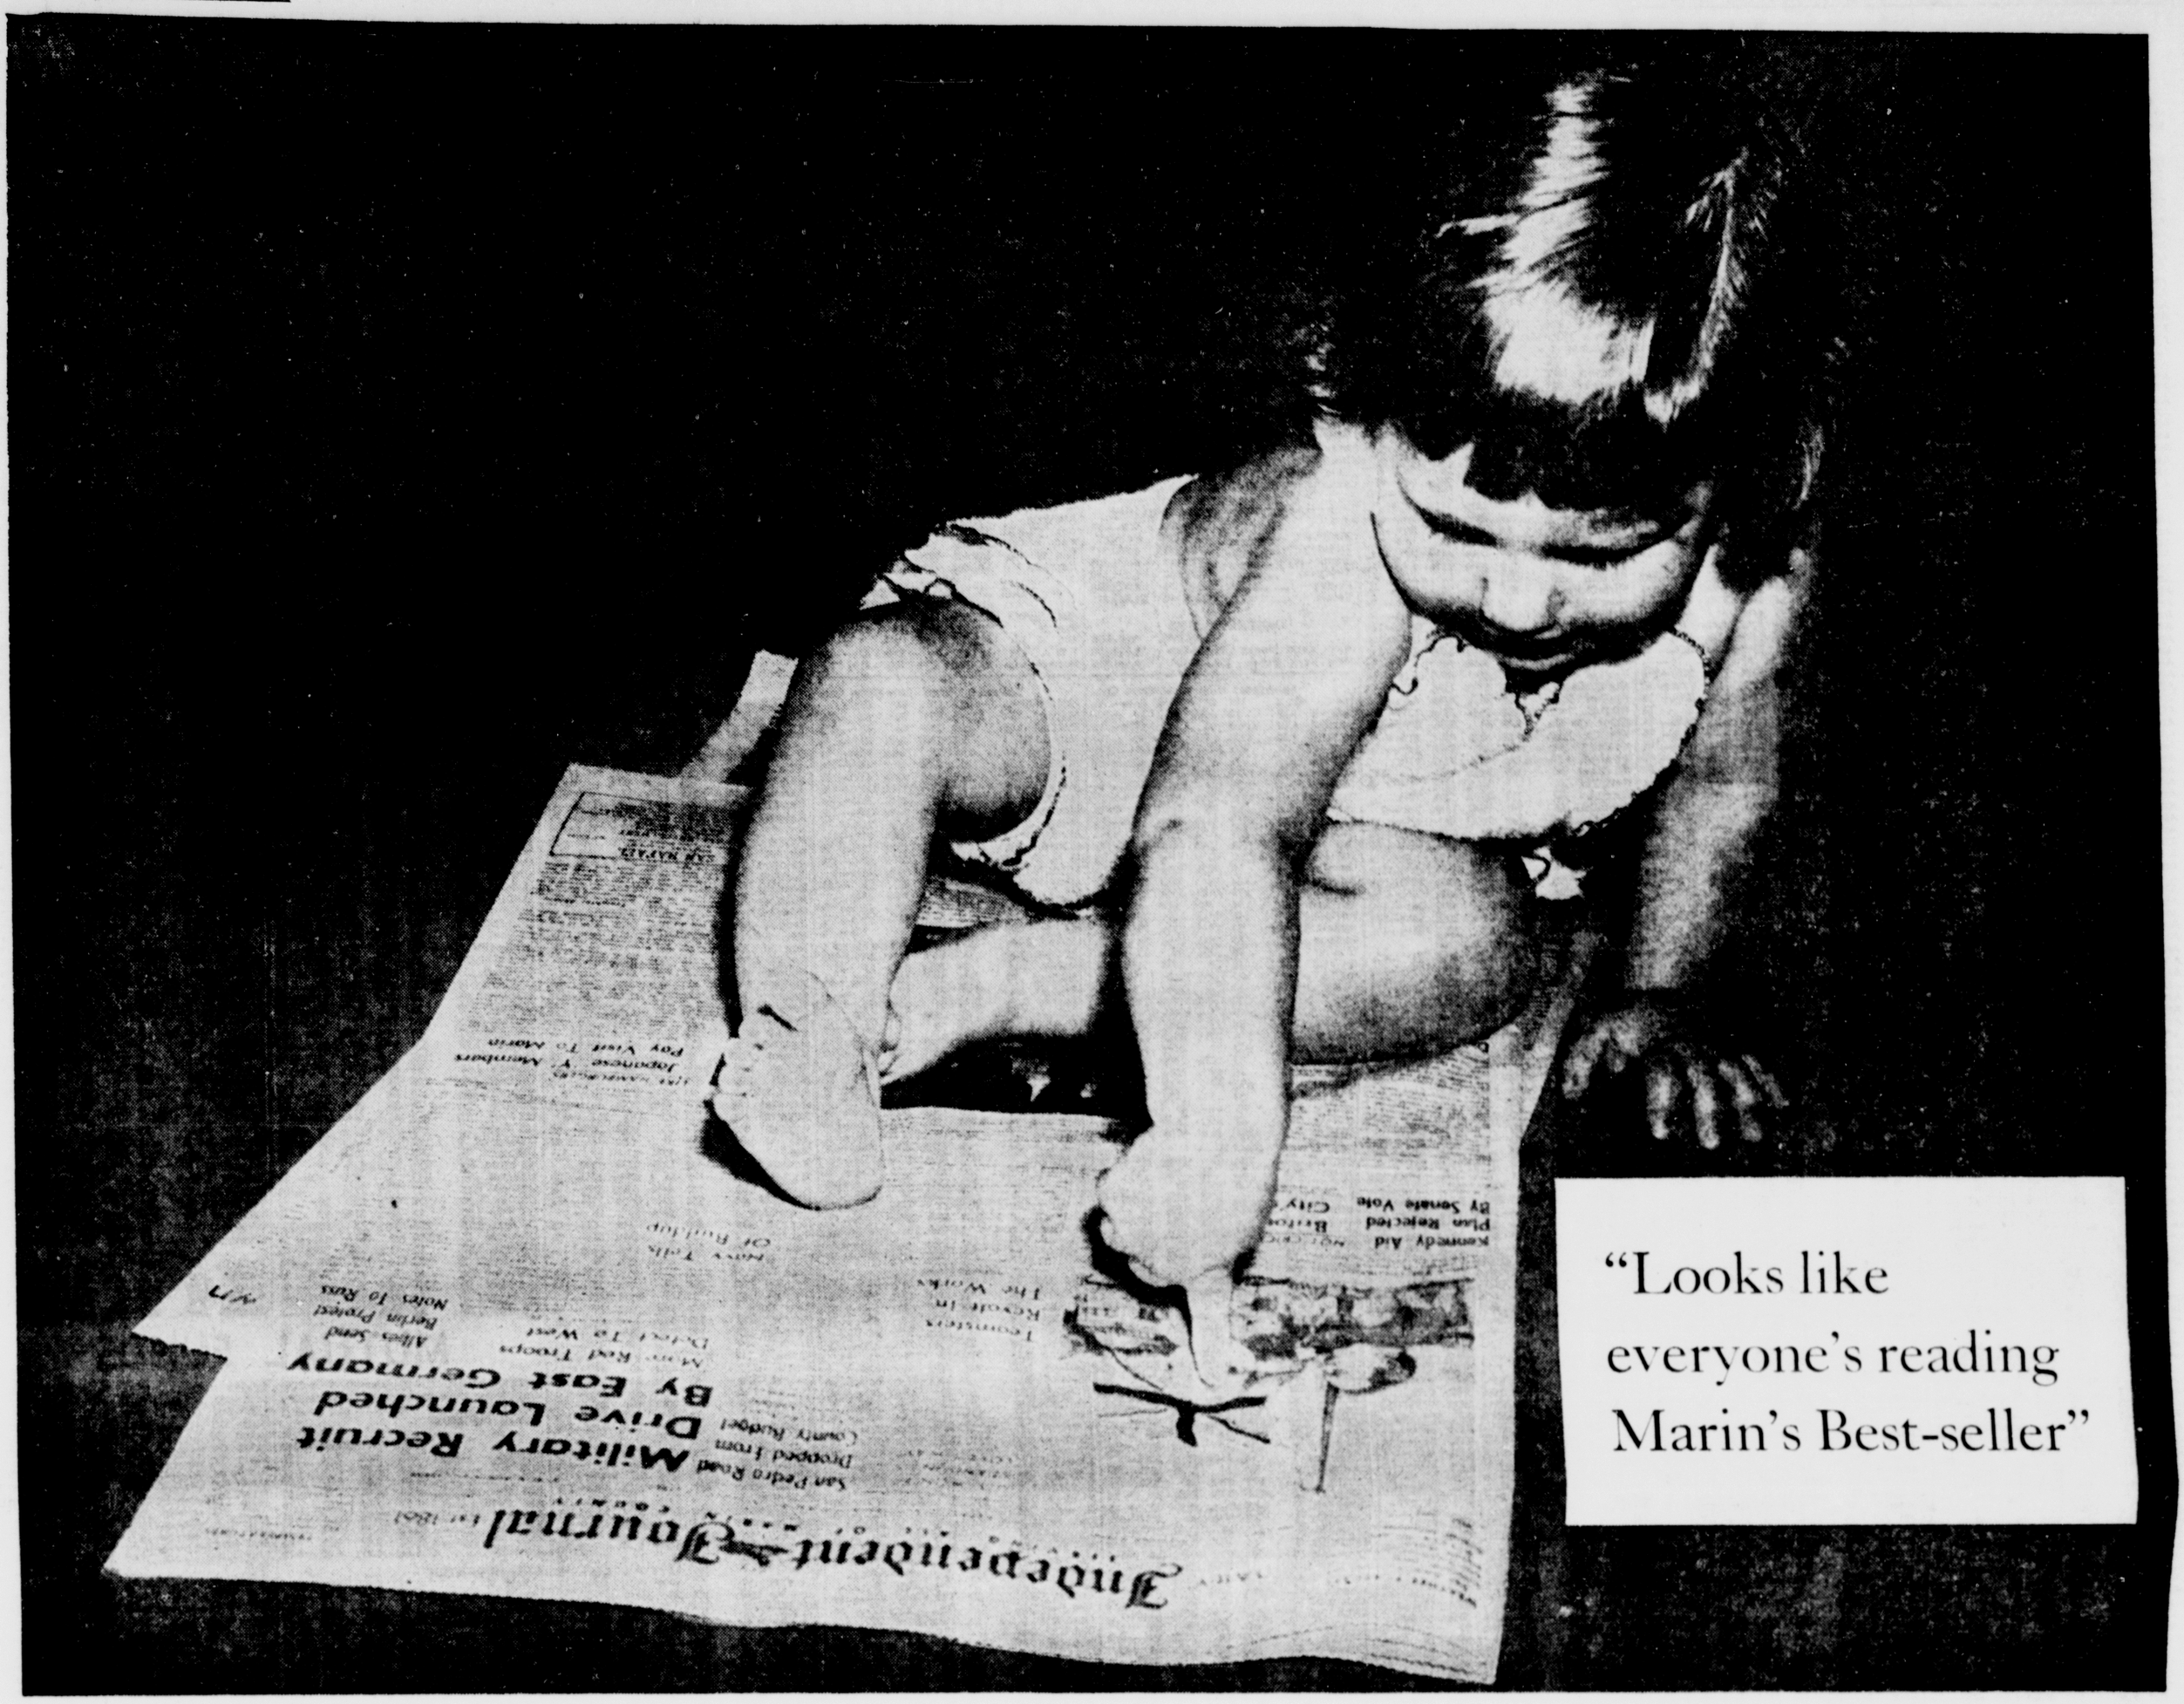

New York—Mayor Robert F. Wagner announced he would not run for a fourth term in this year's mayoralty election. His move provoked a scramble for the Democratic nomination for the mayor's office.

Sanderson, Tex.—At least 13 persons drowned and hundreds of others were left homeless when a 15-foot wall of water pounded through a normally dry canyon like a tidal wave.

New York—Judy Holiday, the actress with a 172 IQ who achieved stardom as a dumb blonde in the play "Born Yesterday," died of cancer in a New York hospital. She was 42.

Quote of the week—Astronaut James McDivitt to his children, Michael, 8, Ann Lynn, 6, and Patrick, 4, on his return from four days in space: "Hey, I see you guys didn't mow my lawn while I was gone."

GIRL'S POSTER PAYS OFF

Debbie Noble, sixth grader at San Rafael's West End School, proudly shows off her winning forest fire prevention poster Thursday to her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edward D. Noble of 8 Viox Way, San Rafael, after she was presented a $25 check by the Redwood Region Conservation Council at the school's annual awards assembly. The poster won first in the intermediate category of the council's annual contest.

San Anselman Earns Degree In Pharmacy

Ronald E. Grady of 23 West Gate Way, San Anselmo, received a B.S. degree in pharmacy Sunday at commencement exercises of Idaho State University, Pocatello.

Grady attended Marin Catholic High School and the College of Marin. He received the Johnson and Johnson award for outstanding accomplishment in pharmacy management.

Church Plans Dinner

A barbecued chicken dinner will be held by the Fairfax Community Church from 3 to 7 p.m. June 26 in Burgar Hall at the church.

Purses Stolen At Tam High

Two Tamalpais High School students have reported thefts of purses at the school, sheriff's officers said yesterday.

Toni Steiner, 16, of 52 Amicita Avenue, Mill Valley, told deputies someone removed a combination lock from her school locker Tuesday and took her wallet containing $17.

Lindsey Turner, 15, of 309 Third Street, Sausalito, reported her billfold, containing only papers, was taken from her purse at school Tuesday.

Construction Firm Truck Is Damaged

Vandals have done more than $300 damage to a construction firm's truck and to a house the firm was building at the end of Ridgewood Drive, San Rafael, police reported.

The windshield, a headlight and a rear window on a truck owned by Alan Kay Construction Co. were broken with rocks; a new bath tub's enamel was chipped with rocks, and tarpaper ready for stucco will have to be replaced because it has been riddled with thrown rocks, foreman William H. Wagner of Santa Rosa told police. The vandals left small footprints in lampblack they scattered all over the floors.

Assembly Votes Bill On Wasting Game

SACRAMENTO (AP) — It would be against the law for hunters to leave the carcasses of animals and birds where they shot them under a bill given final passage today by the Assembly.

The measure by Assemblyman Alan Pattee, R-Salinas, sent to the governor on a unanimous vote, is aimed at prohibiting hunters from wasting game.

Nasty Letters About Our Fight Coverage

It is an axiom of our civilization that most people would rather write than be President.

Unfortunately, they all have my address.

The content is always the same. I'm either a jerk or a genius, a bribe-taker or a fearless puncturer of balloons, a Communist or a crusader.

They're mad at me now becauseI didn't usurp the powers of the FBI, the Federal bench, the Interstate Commerce Committee, and God, and declare the Clay-Liston fight a fix — a fairly dangerous business since fixing a fight is a felony, a sin, and difficult to prove, and punishable by fine, imprisonment, and, presumably, hellfire.

BUT THIS IS a democracy and the voice of the people is entitled to be heard. As the great patriot said, "Give me liberty or a letter to the editor." So, stand clear, and try not to get any on you. And for heaven's sakes, don't make a wave!

"Dear Mr. Murray:

"Everyone knows the fight was fixed . . ."

Marjorie Kellen

—Oh? Then what is J. Edgar Hoover waiting for?

"How can you possibly write that Clay won the fight?"

Ibid

—Well, when the count reached "11," I felt fairly safe.

"IN THE CASE of the Clay-Liston fight, there is nothing wrong with both of them."

Halil Gurelli

—Nicely put, Halil. English translation: "There is plenty wrong with each of them."

"Just to let you know I resent the article regarding Lewiston, Maine . . . is some one a green-eyed monster because Lewiston got the fight?"

Anonymous, Lewiston, Me.

—Well, you might check the mayor of Lewiston. If his eyes aren't green, I'll bet the rest of him is.

"I must say you know very little about the fight game. As you know, Cleveland Williams is the hardest hitter in the business and, in his fight with Sonny, he connected with a solid barn-crushing left hook that only blinked Sonny eyes. Now, you're trying to pint that a pawing half-push right jab will floor him . . ."

Mr. Pack, Oceanside

—WELL, PACKY, I know a a little about the fight game. I know Sonny Liston last fought Cleveland Williams in 1960. I know that from 1960 on, Liston fought a total of three one-round fights up until the first Clay fight. I know that he hasn't had a fight of ANY kind for 16 months. I know that Joe Louis got knocked out in 1951 by Marciano by punches that might not have landed five years before (in 1946 Louis knocked Billy Conn and Tami Mauriello kicking) and the record book lists some 90 fights, including exhibitions, for Louis in the five-year interim. I do know that people age, Mr. Pack. Also, pipes rust, pages yellow, ice melts, teeth decay and time flies. I was covering Sonny Liston in 1965, not 1959. Also, Cleveland Williams is in a Houston hospital with a bullet hole in his belly. Do you think he could stand up to Clay? I was giving news, Mr. Pack, not history.

"You've let me down! Were you drunk at the Ali-Liston farce?"

Bob Hill, Arcadia

—No. Were you?

"I REALIZE the Times pays you to be 'punny,' but there is a limit. Maybe you're writing your columns too far in advance —or maybe you should at least see a fight if you're going to write about it."

Robert E. Cody, Pasadena

—Maybe you should, too. I was at ringside. Where did you "see" it?

"Dear Jim:

"While you were watching Sonny Liston taking a beating from this beautiful piece of fighting machine named Cassius Clay, I was watching a scared, tall boy running for his life from a man who came after him and landed six punches to the body and face, granted they were harmless, Jim . . . And Clay threw just two punches while running away and one was a hard, I repeat HARD, right to Sonny's face that he just forgot to fall down from, but he later remembered what he had to do and did it ever so politely . . ."

Jim Menzer. Associated Newspapers Ltd. of Australia

—OKAY, JIM. But, tell me: If the fix was in, what was Clay so scared about? And how do you go about "running for your life" from a guy who's trying to take a dive for you?

"Your writeup of Clay & Liston stinks, and so do you. You sound more like a Communist than a writer. You forgot to write about the John Birch (sic) or the Ku Klux Klan, the backwood meeting they are having over the weekend. Are you yellow? Could you be one of them? You sound like a goon. And your column still stinks."

Jones A. Jones, Sinton Hotel, Cincinnati

—You sure know how to hurt a fellow, Mr. Jones. But, shucks, nobody's perfect.

Semi-Pro Game Set Tomorrow

The Mill Valley Merchants, with a bye this week in league play, will host the Cal Vets from Yountville in semi-pro baseball tomorrow in a non-league game.

The game will be at Project 17, Mill Valley, at 1:30 p.m.

Keith Fraser will be Mill Valley's starting pitcher.

Lindgren Stars As Track Records Fall

BAKERSFIELD, Calif. (AP)—Oklahoma State's world champion two-mile relay team was heavily favored to win, and possibly break its own record as the United States Track and Field Federation headed into the final round of its third annual meet tonight.

With four meet records broken in the opening program last night —one featuring another brilliant performance by 19-year-old Gerry Lindgren, Washington State freshman, in the six-mile run—a busy evening was forecast for Bakersfield's Memorial Stadium.

The Oklahoma State quartet of Jimmie Metcalf, Dave Perry, John Perry and Thomas Von Ruden set the world record of 7:18.4 in the West Coast relays at Fresno last May.

The four appeared extremely confident of an even better time and keen competition was expected from Villanova and Southern California, the only other teams entered in the special event.

Lindgren was the star of the opening night as he finished two laps in front of some of his rivals, the last one of which came in five minutes and 33 seconds behind the 120 - pound Spokane youth.

Lindgren's time eclipsed the meet record of 29:15.0 set by John Macy of the University of Houston in 1963. And while it will not be recognized as a national collegiate record because Gerry is a freshman, he bettered the 28:35.8 set by collegian Al Lawrence in 1960.

The other three records were:

Tommy Smith of San Jose State in the 220-yard dash. His 20.9 improved the 21.3 registered by Nate Adams of Purdue in 1963.

Larry Livers, Villanova, 51.0 in the 440-hurdles, beating the 51.3 by Billy Hargin of Louisiana State, 1963.

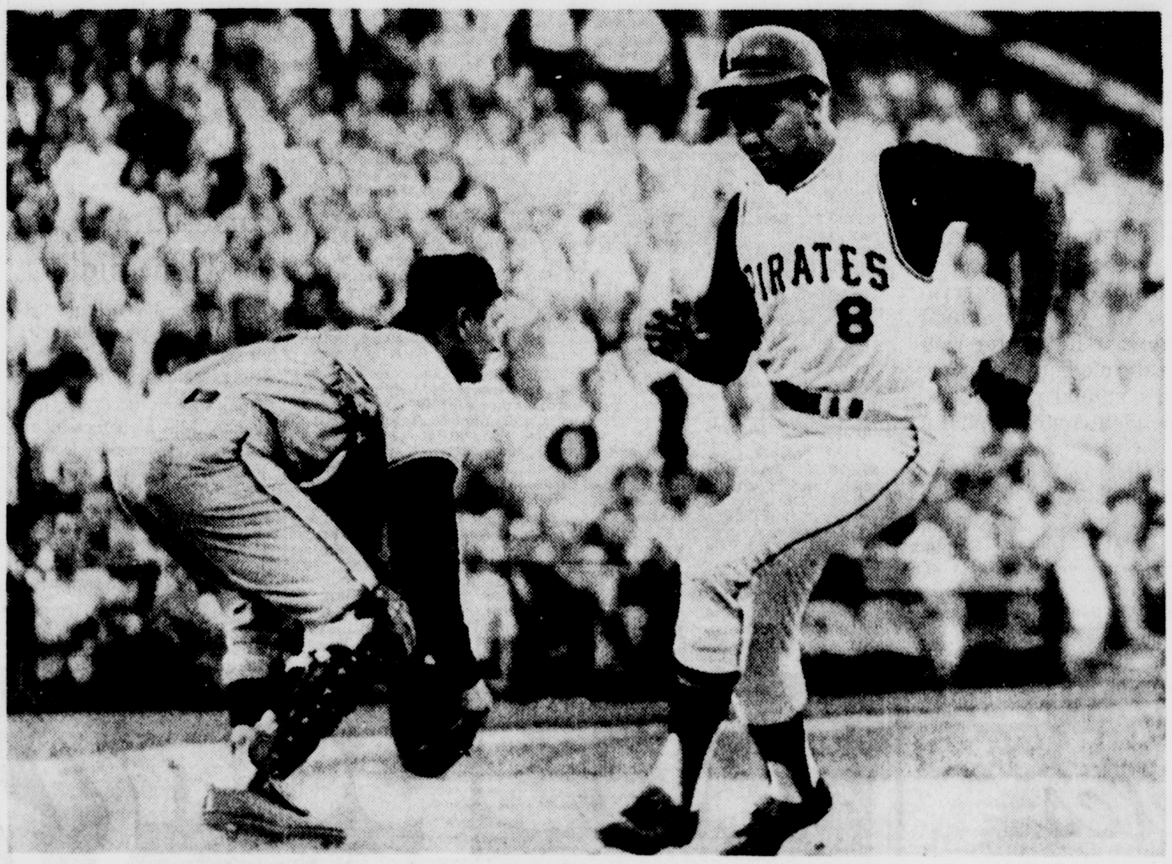

And Bill Corsetti, Northeastern, 192-3 in the hammer throw, breaking the 182-2½ set by Doug Tozour of Navy in 1963.

Bob Day of UCLA is favored to win the mile, another feature of the closing night.

Day won his heat in 4:08.9 with Ed Dean, Notre Dame, just behind in 4:09.2.

The others who qualified for the mile were Paul Schlicke, Stanford; Jim Olson, Kirkwood, Mo., High School; Bob Crombie, South Carolina; Rocky Soderberg, Tennessee; John Link, Southern California Frosh, and Tom Yorgovich, Kansas.

San Jose State led in team points after eight events with 41. Trailing were UCLA, 25, Abilene Christian Track Club, 24, defending champion Southern California, 22, Villanova, 18, Stanford, 16, and Boston College, 14.

WIN STREAK ENDS

Bucs Beat Giants, 5-3

PITTSBURGH (AP)—Don't look now but the San Francisco Giants' win streak has ended—at three games.

The San Franciscans were tied to the mast and whipped 5-3 last night by a Pirate horde which seemingly has forgotten how to lose.

The Giants slipped back into fourth-place, four games behind league-leading Los Angeles.

But in Pittsburgh, they were revelling and even beginning to see a glint of treasure at the end of the National League pennant race. And for good reason.

Although still 5½ games out of the money, the Pirates have proved unbeatable in the last seven games. Of the past 21, they've won 19.

Even Willie Mays' 19th homer couldn't help San Francisco find the way. The blast off starter Don Cardwell in the third drove in three runs.

But the Pirates had already beat the Giants to the scoring column, scoring three runs in the first and two in the second on Jim Pagliaroni's homer.

Mays homer came after Dick Schofield had singled to left and Jesus Alou had singled to left center. No more Giants got on base that inning. Bill Mazeroski threw out Willie McCovey and Jim Hart flied to Bill Virdon to end the Giants' turn at bat.

The San Franciscans came out on the wrong end of double plays in the fourth and ninth.

Don Schwall replaced Cardwell after Len Gabrielson led off the sixth with a single but needed help himself when he walked Jim Davenport.

Frank Carpin turned in a two-hit relief performance for four innings. He didn't give up any hits until J. Alou and Mays singled with two out in the ninth.

Carpin put down the insurrection by retiring McCovey on a grounder.

In the rematch today, the Giants Bob Shaw (5-3) and the Pirates Bob Friend (3-4) were probable starters.

Tommy Aaron Leads Field In Cleveland Golf Tourney

CLEVELAND (AP) — Tommy Aaron, the likeable Georgia pro, carried a two-stroke lead today into the third round of the $135,000 Cleveland Open golf tournament.

The 28-year-old Aaron had his sights set on the big $25,000 prize, a purse that could put him among the top five money makers on the tour.

"I am hitting the ball better this year," the 6-foot-1, 180-pound Aaron confided yesterday after carding a four-under-par 67 for a 36-hole total of 135.

"I feel pretty good about things, but I'm not about to make any predictions," he added.

Aaron had a crack at the title in the first Cleveland Open in 1963. He finished in a three-way tie with Arnold Palmer and Tony Lema and saw Palmer take the money in an 18-hole playoff.

Lema, who won here last year, needed a 12-foot putt on the final hole for a birdie that gave him a 70 and a 137 tota. He shared the runner-up spot with Gordon Jones, a native of Alliance, Ohio, who plays out of Orlando, Fla.

Jones turned in the best round of the tourney with a scintilating 66, five under par on Highland Park's 6,821-yard course. The former Marine Corps pilot set a torrid pace on the front nine with a barrage of five birdies for a 31.

Today's field was trimmed to 82 after a score of 146 or better was needed to stay in the competition's final 36 holes.

Among the casualties were U.S. Open champion Ken Venturi, who finished with 150, Tommy Bolt, Tommy Jacobs and Doug Sanders.

PGA king Bobby Nichols just squeezed in when he shot a 71 for a 146 total.

Still very much alive and only three strokes back at 138 were Dan Sikes and Bert Weaver. Randy Glover showed a 139 while Mason Rudolph, Larry Mowry, Julius Boros, Don Stickney and Billy Casper were bracketed at 140.

A dozen others, including Arnold Palmer and Bruce Crampton, the only triple winner on the tour, were six back at 141.

Californian Leads In First Round Of Bowling Meet

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Andy Marzich, a Torrance, Calif., bowler, leads a field of 96 into the second day of qualifying for the $22,500 Valley Lanes Open today.

Marzich knocked down 2667 pins in yesterday's 12 games to lead second-place Dick Agee of San Jose, Calif., by 65 pins. Marzich had the day's best six-game block when he bowled a 1366 in his second appearance. In that one he started off with only 166, but came back strong with 254-231-245-221-249.

Bob Strompe of Detroit, the Professional Bowling Association's Bowler of the Year and leading money-winner on the tour a year ago, is third with 2597. A 278 game sparked him to a 1347 block last night.

The night's high individual game, however, was bowled by Wally Wagner of Anaheim, Calif., who ran 10 strikes in a row before leaving a 6-pin on a high hit for a 289.

Dodgers Win On Drysdale's Homer

Don Drysdale goes boom. Twice.

The 6-foot-6 Los Angeles ace hit the dirt in the first inning, then came back to hit the jackpot in the eighth as the Dodgers' edged the New York Mets 2-1 last night.

Drysdale fell down in front of 55,023, largest crowd in the majors this season, while pitching to Jesse Gonder, the third batter in the first inning.

He had just let go with a pitch when his left leg buckled under him. He lay on the ground for a few moments, holding his knee in apparent pain. But he got up, took a few practice pitches and struck out Gonder.

The 28-year-old right-hander, displaying no pain, proceeded to set down the Mets on four hits and become the first pitcher in the majors to win 11 games.

He gained the triumph by going boom again. This time, though, he did it with his bat and produced his third home run of the season and 23rd of his career.

The eighth-inning blow came on a 3-2 pitch off Warren Spahn, who had limited the National League-leading Dodgers to three hits in a 1-1 duel.

Drysdale, who has been a 20-game winner only once, now has won nine of his last 10 games and has lost only three times this season. He is 16-1 against the Mets over-all.

Elsewhere in the NL, Pittsburgh trimmed San Francisco 5-3, Milwaukee walloped St. Louis 8-2, Cincinnati edged Chicago 4-3 and Philadelphia nipped Houston 6-5 in 10 innings.

In the American League, Minnesota swept Detroit 5-4 in 10, New York trimmed Los Angeles 6-4, Baltimore got by Boston 5-4 and Kansas City defeated Cleveland 5-2.

Drysdale retired the first 12 Mets he faced. Then Johnny Lewis opened the fifth inning with a single and eventually scored on Joe Christopher's single. John Roseboro homered in the fifth off Spahn, who now is 4-7.

The Pirates won their seventh straight game and 19th of 21, scoring three runs in the first inning on Willie Stargell's two-run triple and Donn Clendenon's sacrifice fly and two in the second on Jim Pagliaroni's homer. The Giants' Willie Mays clouted his 19th homer a three-run blast, in the third.

Felipe Alou snapped a 2-2 tie with a three-run homer in the Milwaukee seventh, and the Braves went on to win their eighth game in the last 10. The Braves added two runs in the eighth with the help of Tracy Stallard's wildness. The Cardinal hurler hit one batter and tossed two wild pitches.

The Reds edged the Cubs on Gordy Coleman's two-run homer in the ninth inning. Coleman also doubled across a run in the first. The Cubs went ahead 3-2 in the sixth, Ernie Banks doubling in one run and scoring another.

Johnny Callison lashed an inside-the-park home run in the 10th inning for the Philadelphia victory. Callison's two-out blow bounced off the scoreboard in right-center field. Houston had tied the game 5-5 in the ninth on Lee Maye's triple and Walt Bond's sacrifice fly.

Phillies Deny Trade Rumor

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Reports that the Philadelphia Phillies were trying to bolster their left handed pitching by trading second baseman Tony Taylor to the New York Mets for pitcher Al Jackson were denied by the Phillies yesterday.

Rumors of such a trade circulated around Connie Mack Stadium during last night's Phillies-Houston game.

General Manager John Quinn said he had not traded Taylor to the Mets for Jackson, and Taylor, reached at home said, "I don't know anything about it."

Indian Valley Golf Winners

Mrs. Lynn Sumpter and Mrs. John Kobil shot a 56 to win the fourth annual Indian Valley Women's Golf Club invitational two-day eclectic tourney this week.

Next were Mrs. William Bevans-Mrs. E. J. Halm, 59,; Bevans-Mrs. E. J. Halm, 59; Mrs. Frank Duddy-Mrs. H. B. Cooley, 60; Mrs. C. Martin-Mrs. Tom Brymer, 61; Mrs. Clay Lilleston-Mrs. Leland Duffield, 61; Mrs. Lew Baysinger-Mrs. Oscar Birkhofer, 61; Mrs. George Nolan-Mrs. Walden Lapham, 61; Mrs. Roger Williams-Mrs. Russell Wardlaw, 61; Mrs. Charles Zapelli-Mrs. E. N. Dawson, 61; Mrs. Art Sears-Mrs. Charles Bennett, 62.

Hole-in-one winners were Mrs. Philip Schaefer and Mrs. Walden Lapham, with distances from the hole of 5 feet, and 3 feet, ½ inch respectively.

Net Favorites Named

LONDON (AP) — Australia's Roy Emerson and Margaret Smith have been made the favorites to win the Wimbledon tennis singles titles in the tournament starting June 21. A leading bookmaker made Emerson an 11-8 choice to retain his crown and Miss Smith a 5-4 favorite to dethrone Brazil's Maria Bueno.

Foursomes Play In Women's Golf

The North Bay Women's Golf Assn. played a best-ball foursome yesterday at the Mill Valley Golf Course.

Winning foursome was composed of Mrs. E. M. Engelbert, Vallejo; Miss Kay Sweeney, Petaluma; Mrs. Frank Kern, Mill Valley, and Mrs. Robert Trannes, Vallejo. Score was 48.

Also scoring 48, but finishing second on the basis of second-ball score, was the foursome of Mrs. Charles Lindgren, Sonoma; Mrs. John Welch, Mill Valley; Mrs. E. J. Martin, Peacock Gap, and Mrs. Joseph Wittenmeier, Mill Valley.

Third foursome was Mrs. Barry March, Sonoma; Mrs. Oscar Birkhofer, Northwood; Mrs. Robert Bardelehen, Indian Valley, and Mrs. Charles Vincent, Sonoma, with a 49.

Grid Star To Wed

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Former Notre Dame football star Jack Snow will marry Carole Shane here today.

Snow's college teammate and Heisman Trophy winner John Huarte will be in the wedding party.

Snow, an end, will be a rookie with the Los Angeles Rams of the National Football League, and Huarte, a quarterback, has signed with the American Football League New York Jets.

British Trail In Davis Cup Tennis Play

LONDON (AP) — Britain faced an uphill battle to stay in the European Zone Davis Cup tennis competition today while France appeared a cinch to move into the semifinals.

The British, down 2-0 after losing the first two singles matches to South Africa, kept their hopes alive yesterday by taking the doubles at Eastbourne, England.

South Africa needs only to win one of the remaining two singles today to keep the Britons out of the semifinals for the first time in 12 years.

Britain's Mike Sangster and Bobby Wilson downed Keith Diepraam and Abe Segal in a 2½ hour match, 8-6, 6-3, 3-6, 4-6, 6-3.

France captured a 2-0 advantage over Yugoslavia in their best-of-five series at Paris. Pierre Barthes defeated Bora Jovanovic, 6-3, 7-9, 7-5, 6-1, an Pierre Darmon downed Nicola Pilic 6-4, 6-4, 4-6, 3-6, 7-5.

The other two quarter-finals between Spain and West Germany and Italy and Czechoslovakia were even at 1-1.

At Barcelona, Germany's Ingo Buding defeated Juan Gisbert 6-3, 7-5, 1-6, 6-4, and Spain's Manuel Santana trounced Wilhelm Bungert 6-2, 6-3, 6-3.

The Czechs surprised by splitting the first two singles with Italy at Prague. Milan Holecek whipped Giuseppe Merlo of Italy 6-4, 5-7, 8-6, 6-1, but Italy's No. 1, Nicola Pietrangeli leveled the score by trouncing Jiri Javorski 6-3, 6-4, 2-6, 6-4.

Softball Game Slate Tomorrow In Hub City

Sohner Tree Service softballers will take on the San Francisco Marauders tomorrow in a double-header beginning at 5 p.m. at Memorial Park in San Anselmo.

The Treemen boosted their record to 11-3 this season when they swept a double-header Thursday night in the Santa Rosa League. Sohner whalloped the Santa Rosa Stars 13-2 and then beat Coast Merchants 3-0. Jess Munyon had a homer in the first game.

Oakland's A.L. Bid Said 'Encouraged'

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—Oakland has had "a lot of encouragement" although no actual commitment for an American League baseball franchise, an official of the new $30 million Oakland - Alameda County Coliseum Complex declares.

Robert T. Nahas, president of the non-profit Coliseum, Inc., made the comment during a press preview at the area where the project is now about 22 per cent completed.

The stadium, which will seat 48,000 for baseball and up to 52,000 when converted for football, is scheduled for completion in the fall of 1966.

The Oakland Raiders of the American Football League will move in then.

In addition to the multi-tiered stadium, the complex will have a circular arena with a 75-foot high exterior and 420-foot diameter. It will house basketball, hockey and, what could be even more important to the Eat Bay economy, a hall for conventions.

The arena and exhibit hall areas are slated to be finished Oct. 1, 1966.

Revenue bonds financed construction. The city of Oakland and Alameda County will each contribute $750,000 annually to the upkeep. Revenues will be returned to the municipal and county funds.

Actually, since it also is in Alameda County, Oakland will pay between 65 and 70 per cent of the costs, Nahas said. Present figures indicate that within 20 years the complex will be self-supporting.

The playing areas in the stadium and arena are sunken, giving fans easier access and also reducing winds. After the furor over Candlestick Park in San Francisco across the bay, the planners put scale models of the Oakland stadium to a wind tunnel test before expressing satisfaction.

Nahas has been the prime mover in the project. The lanky 42-year - old, who stands 6 - 5, proudly points out features of the project to visitors. He cites facts and figures with rapidity.

He serves Coliseum, Inc., without pay. Asked how he earned his living, he answered he was a developer and owned "four or five industrial centers."

A newsman asked if he didn't know the exact number and Nahas counted "five."

OAKLAND-ALAMEDA STADIUM—Pres. Robert T. Nahas, Coliseum, Inc., tries out a sample plastic chair as he points to where home plate will be in baseball stadium of the Oakland-Alameda Complex expected to be finished in summer of 1966. Builders Vs. Husteads Tomorrow

Billings - Hutchison Builders will take on Husteads of Oakland tomorrow in Bay Area Invitational League action at Albert Park in San Rafael, gametime scheduled for 1:30 p.m.

The Mill Valley Merchants, who drew a league bye this week, beat Husteads last week 8-7 in the opening round of the league.

B-H also won its first game of the season, 8-3, over the Hatzell Radio team. That left the two Marin teams and Gino Benedetti baseballers of San Francisco tied for the top spot in league standings.

The Builders will send either Bob DeRosa, a southpaw, or righthander Dave Hughes to the mound tomorrow. Pitching for Husteads will probably be Joe Dorsey.

Before Husteads team members switched sponsors from Milens Jewelers, the Builders fell to this team in their first 12 meetings, all by one run. When they met for the 13th time, the Builders finally won, also by only one run.

Starting lineup and batting order for the Builders:

Don Lauters, ss; Dick Spackman, 1b; Jess Munyon, c; Doug Wilson, lf; Ernie Demattei, rf; Vince Pallavicini, cf; John Brookman, 2b; Jerry Crues, 3b; and either DeRosa or Hughes, p.

AAU-NCAA HASSLE

Olympic Committee Meet Slated Today

CHICAGO (AP) — The United States Olympic Committee, hoping for a quick meeting to accelerate preparation for the 1968 Olympiad at Mexico City, instead may run into an AAU-NCAA buzzsaw today.

A hot issue in the scheduled two-day meeting is a proposal to revise membership of the USOC's Games Committees, giving control to the member group which has international sanction.

At present, the AAU and NCAA — long bickering over sanctioning control of amateur competitions — share equal membership on the various games committees in charge of the more than 20 sports on the Olympic program.

The AAU has sole recognition by the International Amateur Athletic Federations in the main Olympic attraction, track and field.

If two-thirds of the more than 200 delegates at the USOC meeting accepts the touchy proposal, the NCAA and its sponsored National Track and Field Federation will lose considerable stature in the Olympic structure.

The two groups long have bickered over sanctioning power and the latest standoff is the National AAU track and field meet at San Diego, June 26-27. The meet qualifies American contenders for the U.S.-Russia dual meet in Kiev, July 30-31.

The NCAA, at its January convention, invoked a ban against collegiate athletes participating in open competitions not sharing NCAA sanction.

The AAU yesterday spurned a peace offer by NCAA President Everett Barnes of Colgate, agreeing to let undergraduates participate in the San Diego meet if dual sanction was permitted by the AAU.

USOC Executive Director Art Lentz took an optimistic view towards the special session starting today.

"All we want to do is revamp our structure so we can start organizing for the 1968 Games sooner," said Lentz.

"This could be a very routine meeting, but I can't anticipate what will happen when the Games Committee revision proposal hits the floor."

The idea of the special meeting, Lentz said, was to clear the decks for an efficient regular quadrennial USOC meeting at Washington, D.C., Nov. 29.

Jazy Misses In Try For New Record

PARIS (AP) — The world 5,000 meter running record escaped Michel Jazy of France last night, but he still hopes to get it.

Jazy has set himself a punishing program. He has run four races in 10 days, and set European or world records each time out. The crowning performance was his 3:53.6 world record in the mile Wednesday night.

Tonight he will run in Sochaux, in east central France, at 2,000 meters, a distance where he holds the world record of 5:01.6. If the pace is right he might try to lower the mark he set in 1962.

The 8,000 spectators in the stands cheered mightily but the best Jazy could do was 13:29 in the 5,000 yesterday. This was enough to clip more than five seconds off his own European record of 13:34.4 set last Sunday. Along the way he was clocked in 13:05.6 for a new European record in the three-mile.

The world's fastest time for the 5,000 meter is 13:25.8, set by Ron Clarke of Australia last week in Los Angeles. The Aussie also has a pending world mark of 13:00.4 for three miles.

Jazy did not say when he might try again at 5,000 meters, but he hinted that he would be looking for another chance soon.

Upset Scored In Tennis

Unseeded Jack Bowker of Sacramento yesterday upset John Fleitz in National Hardcourt junior veterans' tennis championships at the Mill Valley Tennis Club. Score was 5-7, 6-4, 7-5.

Only Marinite remaining in the tourney is Earl Kissinger of Corte Madera, who, paired with John Delantoni of Burlingame, won his way into the finals of Men's 55-and-over doubles play.

Results:

Men's 35-Singles (quarterfinals)—Jack Bowker d. John Fleitz, 5-7, 6-4, 7-5; Hugh Stewart d. Butch Krikorian 6-1, 6-1; Clint Arbuckle d. Don Jacobus, 6-4, 6-4; Elston Wyatt d. Jim Bisch, 6-2, 6-2; Doubles (quarterfinals)—Ehmke-Lucey d. Jacobus-Neale, 6-4, 12-10; Krikorian-Gale d. Wyatt-Brooks, 6-2, 6-1; Arbuckle-Woolfson d. Bowker-Williams, 6-2, 5-7, 6-3; Graf-Prosser d. Stewart Fleitz, default.

Men's 55-Singles (quarterfinals)—John Cassel d. Bill Bowker, 6-4, 6-1; Paul Stagg d. Herb Graeber, 6-3, 6-3; (semifinals)—Andrew Crane d. Earl Kissinger, 6-1, 9-7; Doubles (semifinals) Delantoni Kissinger d. Gassaway-Prosser, 6-4, 9-7; Stratford-Chandler d. Richardson-Welch, 6-1, 8-6.

Water Ski Jump Tourney On Tap

The Water Skiers of Marin are sponsoring a jump tournament at Mira Monte Marina in Novato tomorrow, with activity scheduled to begin at 11 a.m.

The tourney is part of eliminations for the California State Championships scheduled July 24-25 at Berkeley's Aquatic sanction of the American Water Park. The tourney is under the Ski Assn.

Tomorrow's tourney will be at the site of the third annual Western Experts Championships scheduled June 26 and 27.

Road Races Slated For This Weekend

Marin County is well represented in the entry lists for the 14th annual Port Stockton National Championship road races being held this weekend.

Competing for honors in the eight races today and tomorrow will be Ed Marshall of Kentfield, Perry Pacheco of Novato, Nick Reynolds and Walt Benson of Sausalito, and Robin Jackson, Walt Gish, Allan Maxey and Bob Pearson, all of Mill Valley.

They will be among nearly 200 drivers and cars participating in the races, under the sponsorship of the San Joaquin County Widows and Orphans Benefit Assn.

Most of today has been devoted to time trials, with one race late in the afternoon. Seven national championship races will be held tomorrow, starting at 9:30 a.m.

Destruction Derby

A destruction derby will be added to the regular hardtop racing program at the Petaluma Fairgrounds tonight, with first prize set at $125.

A destruction derby is where drivers get junkers from the scrap yards and use them as wrecks. The idea is to put the other car out of commission before it gets yours.

Qualifying for the regular program starts at 7 p.m., and the first race is scheduled to start at 8:15. The crash derby is the final event.

Vallejo Hardtops

Bay Cities Racing Assn. modified hardtops will roll at the Vallejo Speedway tonight in the weekly series of races. Julian Castro of San Francisco will lead the corps of more than 60 drivers.

The card is scheduled to begin with time trials at 7:30 p.m., with heat racing starting at 8:30 p.m. A total of nine races will be presented.

Drag Races Slated

Jack Richardson of San Rafael will try for his second victory in a row tonight at the Vaca Valley Drag Strip. Time trials start at 4 p.m., followed by eliminations at 9 p.m.

Richardson won a trophy in Class PS last Saturday with a speed of 83 miles per hour and an elapsed time of 15.48 seconds.

$3,500 Bowl Tournament Begins Today

Some of the top bowlers in the state will invade Country Club Bowl in San Rafael this weekend for the $3,500 Central California Professional Bowlers Assn. tournament today and tomorrow.

The tourney is the third stop of the CCPBA summer schedule. Qualifying rounds will be held this evening starting at 5 o'clock, and finals will be held tomorrow starting at noon.

Leading the entrants is current champ Fred Krausher of Sacramento, winner of the May 8 and 9 tourney in Stockton. Lou Eastland, Dick Treadway and Jack Borkowski of San Rafael are entered in the tourney that has a top prize of $600.

There is no admission charge for spectators.

VIKINGS WIN

MINNESOTA (UPI) — The Minnesota Vikings were the only National Football League team to win all five exhibition games prior to the 1964 season.

Floundering Yanks Finally Start Climbing A.L. Ladder

The New York Yankees, defending American League champions, who have been bogged down in the second division since April, continued their most sustained drive of the season last night as Al Downing staggered to a 13-hit, 6-4 victory over the Los Angeles Angels.

The triumph was the sixth in the last seven games for the Yankees, hopped them over Boston into seventh place for the first time since May 15 and left them only one-half game to the rear of the sixth-place Angels.

At the top of the league, meanwhile, the first-place Minnesota Twins and runner-up Chicago White Sox remained 1½ lengths apart, each sweeping twi-night doubleheaders.

The Twins swept Detroit in a pair of extra inning games, winning both by 5-4 scores, the opener in 10 innings and the nightcap in 12 as Jimmie Hall produced the decisive run in each.

Reliever Eddie Fisher played the key role for the White Sox, saving Juan Pizarro's first victory of the season in a 5-2 opening game triumph over Washington, then turning up the winner in a 5-4, 10-inning second game triumph.

Elsewhere, Kansas City downed Cleveland 5-2 behind Rollie Sheldon's first victory and Jim Landis' first homer and Baltimore edged Boston 5-4 on John Orsino's two-run homer.

The Yankees, outhit 13-10, got the job done with a pair of run-scoring doubles by Roger Maris, a run-producing double by Doc Edwards and singles by Bobby Richardson and Clete Boyer that drove in runs.

Downing, meanwhile, was getting whacked but wasn't in trouble until Jose Cardenal slammed a three-run homer in the eighth inning. But Downing, who stranded nine Angels from the second to the seventh, did another flip-flop and set Los Angeles down 1-2-3 in the ninth.

The Twins tied the opener in the ninth on two walks by Larry Sherry, a sacrifice and a wild pitch by Terry Fox that let Don Mincher score. Then, in the 10th, Hall brought in the winner with a sacrifice fly after singles by Sandy Valdespino and Frank Kostro plus a sacrifice by Tony Oliva.

Hall capped a three-run outburst in the 12th inning of the nightcap with a run-producing triple after Bob Allison's single and a sacrifice fly by Kostro had brought the first two runs across. Hall's triple proved decisive when Jim Northrup hit a two-run homer in the Tigers' half.

Harmon Killebrew drove in the first two Minnesota runs with his 10th homer and a single but homers by George Thomas and Don Demeter pulled Detroit into a tie.

Fisher picked up his 13th save in the opener against the Senators, coming on for Pizarro in the sixth inning. The victory for Pizarro, a 19-game winner last season, squared his record at 1-1. Fisher got the victory in the nightcap for a 6-1 record when Don Buford led off the 10th with a homer.

Danny Cater hit a homer in each game for the White Sox, his fifth inning shot in the opener proving the decisive run.

Landis drove in three runs with a two-run single in the second inning and a solo homer in the seventh for the A's while Sheldon, making his fifth start since he was acquired from the Yankees, checked the Indians on seven hits.

Orsino's two-run homer in the fourth inning closed out the scoring in the Orioles-Red Sox game. Felix Mantilla and Lee Thomas homered for Boston before Baltimore relievers Harvey Haddix and Stu Miller pitched shutout ball over the last six innings.

BOXING DEATHS

NEW YORK (UPI) —There have been three deaths from injuries suffered in world title boxing bouts. The victims were Jimmy Doyle (vs. Ray Robinson), Benny (Kid) Paret (vs. Emile Griffith) and Davey Moore (vs. Sugar Ramos).

Tennis Openings Still Available

Openings are still available in the tennis instruction program being sponsored by the City of Sausalito under a paid program as well as the unlimited free program, City Mgr. Charles A. Brown said yesterday.

The free program starts June 21, is held each Monday, 1 to 3 p.m. and the paid program starts June 22, to be held either Tuesday and Thursday or Wednesday and Friday from 3:30 to 5:30 p.m. The commencing dates were earlier announced erroneously by Brown as June 14 and 15.

Softball Winners

San Quentin Ranch inmates' softball team, defeated last week by the Novato Police Dept. team, turned the tables with a vengeance yesterday, clobbering the Novato lawmen 27-5. A 10-run first inning left the police team out of contention.

British Lead In Meet

LONDON (AP) — Britain led Finland 74-46 after the first day of the two-day swimming meet between the two nations at the Cyrstal Palace. The British won nine of the 10 events Friday night.

Wins Daily Double

BOSTON (AP) — After going without a victory in the first 46 days of the meeting, jockey Richard Bruno rode both ends of a $114.20 daily double at Suffolk Downs yesterday.

French Jockey Wins

STANTON, Del. (AP) — Jean Cruguet, 26-year-old French-born jockey, scored his first triumph in the United States with King Olay, $5.80, in the third race at Delaware Park yesterday. He came to America last winter.

Church In Round Due For Ignacio

Ground will broken at 10 a.m. Wednesday for an Episcopal "church in the round" in the new Loma Verde shopping center in Ignacio.

Right Rev. James A. Pike, Bishop of the Episcopal Diocese of California, will officiate at the service of dedication of the church, to be called Christ Church, to St. Ignatius of Antioch.

The building, expected to be completed in mid-autumn, was designed by Apaydin-Lockwood-Angell Associates of Berkeley and will be built by Crown Development Co. of San Rafael.

Rev. Charles Gompertz, curate at St. John's Episcopal Church in Ross, will be the vicar of the new Christ Church.

The sanctuary will be constructed of natural materials and will be used as a meeting place for various groups during the week.

The building will be leased from the owner of the shopping center and will contain facilities for classrooms, storage and food preparation.

The church, located on Ignacio Boulevard across Highway 101 from Hamilton Air Force Base, will also have facilities for a theater-in-the-round.

A POLYGON WITH A COPPER TOP

The proposed Our Lady of Mount Carmel Church, Mill Valley, is a polygon (12-sided) structure. It is to be of brick and cast stone, hold 900 in fan-type seating and cost about $500,000. Copper spire is 130 feet from the ground. There will be 91 parking spaces and entrance faces south. Polygon design is repeated in rectory, left, which will house Rev. John J. O'Brien, pastor, and two assistants. City councilmen Monday voted to abandon a portion of Oakdale Avenue near West Blithedale Avenue for better site development. Fred T. Houweling of Burlingame is architect.

VIET NAM STAND TROUBLES CLERGY

Undeclared War's Moral Issues Give Rise To Churchmen's Declaration

By LOUIS CASSELS
United Press International

Many U.S. religious leaders are troubled in conscience about this country's military activities in Viet Nam.

And they are beginning to say so out loud.

Thoughtful churchmen have been reluctant to engage in public criticism of the nation's foreign policy. They are well aware that the Vietnamese situation is complex, and that private citizens do not have all the information available to President Johnson.

But they also know that his consideration, carried to an extreme, could silence all debate in a democracy. And some feel it is becoming urgent for all Americans, not merely a handful of decision-makers in the government, to examine the moral questions raised by our growing involvement in an undeclared war in Southeast Asia.

This attitude was reflected in a statement this week by the editors of "Christianity and Crisis," one of the nation's most respected Protestant journals. Among the signers were such heavyweight theologians as Reinhold Niebuhr, John C. Bennett, Robert McAfee Brown and Harvey Cox.

They said that "many men of insight doubt the wisdom of our policy" in Viet Nam.

"We have not turned back the 'aggression' from the North despite the fact that we have stepped up the war. Much of what we are doing in Viet Nam has the opposite effect of what is intended. We may be destroying our chance to cooperate with the Soviet Union for peace in Asia, and we are likely to drive the North Vietnamese into the hands of the Chinese.

"Furthermore, by continuous bombing north of the 17th parallel, we are risking a war between major powers that no one wants."

Without claiming that their viewpoint is "the only one compatible with Christian faith and ethic," the Protestant thinkers voiced three strong convictions about U.S. policy:

—"In no case can we sanction the bombing of population centers in North Viet Nam."

—"Our policy needs to reflect awareness that the disorder in South Viet Nam is in part an internal conflict and cannot be overcome merely by action taken from the outside."

—"The United States must clarify the apparent conflict between its offer of unconditional negotiations and its insistence on an independent South Viet Nam as the outcome of negotiations."

There has been comparatively little criticism of the administration's Viet Nam policy from Catholic leaders. On the contrary, Msgr. George Higgins, director of the Social Action Department of he National Catholic Welfare Conference, let go recently with a blast at "uninformed clergymen" who "insist that the United States get out of Viet Nam immediately, regardless of the consequences."

Msgr. Higgins also refused any official Catholic participation in an interfaith "March on the Pentagon" which was staged last month by some 500 religious leaders to dramatize their concern about the Viet Nam situation.

Larkspur Parish Golden Jubilee Mass Tomorrow

The golden jubilee of St. Patrick's Church, Larkspur, will be celebrated with a solemn High Mass at 4 p.m. tomorrow, with Archbishop Joseph T. McGucken presiding and the parish's first vocation to the priesthood, newly ordained Rev. Alan Armstrong, as deacon.

The parish, originally a mission of St. Raphael's and later of St. Anselm's, was created in 1915. The original church was dedicated in 1899.

A second church, finished in 1905, later served as parish hall until 1960, after the present church was constructed in 1941.

Fairfax Churches In Joint Census Program

A United Census Program, a non-denominational visitation program to new families in the Fairfax area, will be conducted by members of St. Augustine's Episcopal, Christ the Victor Lutheran, Community and St. Rita's Catholic churches.

New residents will be welcomed to the community in the name of the churches participating in the new program.

Vacation Bible Classes Listed

Schedule of vacation Bible school classes at the Luthern Church of the Resurrection, 1100 Las Gallinas Avenue, Terra Linda, has been announced by the church's board of education.

Classes will be held Monday through Friday, June 21 to July 2 from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. A special music program for all children will be conducted by Anne Nurge, director of music.

Registration will be held from 10 a.m. to noon June 19 at the church for children entering kindergarten in September through sixth graders.

Christian Unity Search Asked By Scientists

BOSTON — The Christian Science Church board of directors has urged its church members to find the "areas of agreement" which exist with other denominations — "rather than think of ourselves as entirely different or exclusive."

The request was made during the annual meeting of the Mother Church, the First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Mass.

"On the basis of its spirituality Christian Science has much in common with other denominations," the message noted.

"To every honest adherent of any God-centered faith sincerely working to uplift and unify the human race, we offer our fellowship and support."

Children's Day Ceremony Set At Unity Church

Tomorrow will be Children's Day at Unity Christ Church of Marin, 167 Tunstead Avenue, San Anselmo, according to Candida Wright, minister.

Visitors have been invited to visit classes at the church to see the work that has been done for the children in the Sunday School department.

Special programs in which the children will participate will be held at the 9:30 and 11 a.m. services. Mrs. Wright will speak on the subject, "Walking in the Light" based on Jesus blessing the children who were brought to Him, as recorded in the Gospel of Luke. Sunday School convenes at 9:30 a.m. Sundays with classes for children of all ages.

Per Capita Giving Up For State Methodists

Dr. Frank Webber of Mill Valley, treasurer of the California-Nevada conference of the Methodist Church, has reported per capita giving of all conference members was $96 last year, compared with $90 the previous year.

He said during the year which ended May 31, the California-Nevada conference led all Methodist conferences in the nation in per capita giving.

Total contributions for the year for all purposes in the conference was more than 12.5 million dollars.

Membership in the conference dropped less than one-half of one per cent during the past year. The current membership is 130,788 persons.

Novato Minister Changes Pulpits, To School Again

Rev. Warren W. Peters, minister of the Novato Community Methodist Church the past three years, has been granted a Sabbatical year's work by Bishop Donald Harvey Tippet. He has accepted an internship in counseling at the American Institute of Family Relations in Los Angeles, starting Tuesday. He will conclude his ministry in the Novato pulpit tomorrow.

Upon appointment by Bishop Tippett he plans to become student pastor at the Tamalpais Valley Methodist Church and will commute to Los Angeles weekly. Mrs. Peters will continue her work at Marin General Hospital in X-ray department.

Since coming to Novato in 1962, Rev. Peters has administered 112 baptisms and received 247 new members into the church. A new educational unit has been constructed under his leadership, and the Sunday School and other programs have grown. The budget has increased from $16,000 to almost $32,000.

Mrs. Conrad Putnam, president of the Women's Society of Christian Service, announces a fellowship hour will be held following the 11 a.m. service tomorrow to give members and friends opportunity to honor the pastor and his wife.

Synod Speech Due

Professor David Noel Freedman of San Francisco Theological Seminary in San Anselmo will address the 114th annual session of the Synod of California, United Presbyterian Church, to be held Monday through Thursday at Occidental College in Eagle Rock, Los Angeles County.

Parish Picnic Slated For St. Paul's Church

St. Paul's Episcopal Church will hold its fourth annual Parish Picnic at the Bishop's Ranch, Healdsburg.

Members will leave for the ranch following the 9 a.m. Holy Communion service. The regular services at 7:30 and 11 a.m. Will be held as usual.

U Thant To Speak At Peace Conclave

The confirmation of U Thant, secretary general of the United Nations, as principal speaker at the Convocation of Religion for World Peace in the Cow Palace at the June 27, afternoon session and the appointment of two more religious leaders to represent the seven principal faiths numbering more than two billion members, has been announced by the organizing committee for the event.

The Convocation will mark the first time these recognized leaders of the world's religions will have come together to express themselves for a common cause. Aim of the Convocation will be to demonstrate the world-wide support of all religions for the peace objectives of the United Nations.

Bishop Prince Taylor, the first Negro president of the Board of Bishops of the Methodist Church, will be spokesman for the world's 219,000,000 Protestants at the Convocation, which follows the 20th commemorative anniversary of the United Nations in San Francisco on June 25 and 26. A native of Hennesey, Oklahoma, Bishop Taylor was elected to his post in 1965 and had served for ten years as Methodist bishop in Monrovia, Liberia.

Chakravarthi V. Narasimhan, chef de Cabinet of the United Nations Secretary General and a long-time member of the government of India will speak for the world's 150,000,000 Hindus at the Convocation.

Pope Paul VI has named Archbishop Martin J. O'Connor, president of the Pontifical Commission for Social Communications to head the official Catholic delegation. Other representatives of the world's 558,000,000 Catholics will be the Rt. Rev. Alberto Giovanneti, the Vatican's permanent observer at the United Nations and Professor Oscar Halecki, of Fordham University. Already announced as representing the Jewish, Muslim, Buddhist and Greek Orthodox faiths — numbering a total of 745,000,000 members—will be Rabbi Louis Jacobs of the New London Synagogue, London, England; Sheikh Hassan Ma'Amoon, rector of Al Azhar University, Cairo, Egypt; Dr. G. P. Malalasekera, first president of the World Federation of Buddhists, Ceylon, India; and Archbishop Iakovos, primate of the Greek Orthodox Church of North and South America.

Admission to the Convocation will be by invitation. Tickets are available through churches, synagogues and other religious organizations in the Bay Area.

Annual Methodist Conclave Puts Stress On Ecumenism

Christian unity is a principal theme at the California-Nevada Annual Conference of the Methodist Church, at the University of the Pacific in Stockton. The conclave ends tomorrow.

Roman Catholic Archbishop Joseph T. McGucken of San Francisco interpreted the Vatican Ecumenical Council in a major address Wednesday evening. He was followed Thursday and Friday nights by Dr. William R. Cannon, dean of the Candler School of Theology, Methodist, at Atlanta, Ga., who discussed Methodist ecumenical adventures.

Some 400 ministers and the elected laymen delegates of 395 Methodist churches in Northern California and Nevada, form the voting membership of the conference, a legislative body charged with adopting a budget and program for the church year ahead. They represent a Methodist membership of about 130,000 in the area. Recommended to them was a budget of over $2 million, up $175,000 from last year.

At the close of the session tomorrow appointments of the ministers of the Conference, assigned to their pulpits annually, will be read by Bishop Tippett.

Anniversary Fete Surprises Pastor

Pastor Ole Winter of the Good Shepherd Luthern Church in Novato, was given a surprise party on the 10th anniversary of his ordination as a minister last Sunday.

Members of the Luthern League, the church's youth group, Ralph Lewis, Intern Kenneth Knutson and KGO television newscaster Roger Grimsby, Pastor's Winter's college roommate, presented a program, "This Is Your Life" during the party.

The minister, father of three boys and one girl, and his wife came to Good Shepherd Lutheran Church in September, 1959. He interned at a church in San Diego and was ordained June 5, 1955, in Osage, Minn.

Confirmation Slated

Twelve persons will be confirmed in Holy Innocents' Episcopal Church in Corte Madera Right Rev. Richard Millard tomorrow. A reception will be held after the service, sponsored by St. Edward's Guild.

POPE IN PISA—Against the startling backdrop of the famed Leaning Tower, Pope Paul VI greeted an estimated 300,000 countrymen Thursday when he paid a precedent-setting, flying visit to the Italian National Eucharistic Congress to attend the "Day of the Priesthood." The celebrated "Square of Miracles" where the tower stands was packed with more persons than the entire population boasted by the city, reports said.

Redwood Rites Will Dedicate New Building

The dedication service for Redwoods Presbyterian Church's new building will be held at 10:00 a.m. tomorrow, to mark the completion of the church building program.

Rev. Wayne M. Hansen, pastor of Redwoods Church when the now-concluded building plan was originated, will participate in dedication service. The architect, Donald P. Smith and a representative from William H. McDevitt Co., the builder, will also be present.

The service will begin in the sanctuary and will conclude in the outdoor patio area about 11:15.

Following the service there will be an open house in the new building. The Deacons will serve coffee and refreshments.

St. Rita Graduates 38 Eighth Graders

Thirty-eight eighth grade students graduated from the Grammer School of Religion in Saint Rita's Parish, Fairfax, this week.

A dinner honoring the graduates was held recently in the parish hall with Vincent Boyle, counselor and teacher at Sir Francis Drake High School, San Anselmo, the guest speaker.

The floor plans are unusually convenient and thoughtfully arranged.

Clerestory windows in both ends of the living area provide both light and privacy.

It's a yummy kitchen, fully electric, of course, with such nice details as adjustable shelves, covered vinyl floors, formica faced cabinets for looks and easy upkeep.

Carpets are included in the price. They're deluxe quality 25 oz. continuous filament with double jute backs on 50 oz. pad.

You will be completely surprised to discover how big this house is with 4 bedrooms plus a "mud room" in the bedroom wing . . . two baths and a 6'x12' dressing closet.

The home "wraps around" and shelters a lovely outdoor living area, completely private from the street, overlooked by the kitchen and reached through sliding glass doors from both family room and master bedroom.

The price is "lovely," too, the 4 br./2 bath model starting at

Everyone's Talking About THE OAKVIEW CLUB at THE MEADOWS

WHY? . . . Because the Oakview Club—your own Private Club, is just a short walk from your beautiful Apartment or Townhouse. There is a putting green, lockers, men's and women's lounges, showers and sauna baths . . . 2 sunken championship tennis courts with a seating capacity for 500 spectators . . . two large heated swimming pools and a wading pool . . . shuffleboard, ping-pong and a large, comfortable sunning area . . . all this amidst rolling hills, studded with ancient oaks and beautifully landscaped.

THE CLUB HOUSE itself is luxuriously furnished . . . the cocktail lounge is carpeted and has a huge fireplace . . . intimate social-dining room . . . spacious facilities for private receptions, parties, bridge, teen-age dances and indoor movies.

APARTMENTS consist of one, two and three bedrooms.

TOWNHOUSES consist of two and three bedrooms, 1½ baths.

CHOICES of parquet flooring or area carpeting. All are beautifully draped. All have louvered doors within. Kitchens are completely electric. All refrigerators are self-defrosting and have separate freezer tops. THESE UNITS ARE THE ONLY ONES IN MARIN COUNTY WITH CENTRAL AIR CONDITIONING, THERMOSTATICALLY CONTROLLED. Rents start at $160 per month and afford family membership in the Oakview Club.

MODEL apartments, townhouses and the Oakview Club are open for YOUR inspection. Come out and compare.

DIRECTIONS: Past San Rafael take Terra Linda turnoff, continue to the end of Freitas Parkway, and then you enter THE MEADOWS.

TELEVISION REVIEW

'Tis The Season To Kick TV Habit

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — The dog days — and nights — of television are upon us.

'Tis the season to kick the television habit once and for all. Viewers looking for an excuse to shake the TV monkey off their backs need only flick around the dial to be overwhelmed by a plague of reruns.

Even the stars don't watch their own re-runs.

However, those who are hopelessly addicted to the boob tube have the opportunity to watch shows they ignored during the regular season.

Last night, for example, the viewer devoted to "International Showtime" could skip the re-run of the swinging Swedish circus (and who would want to see THAT twice, and tune in "Rawhide." Or Addams Family" fans could switch over to look in on "The Bob Hope Theater" for a change.

This summer there hardly are any replacement shows at all; and none on Friday nights. There is no relief in sight for Friday viewers until the fall when new segments will be seen and many of the current series will be gone for good.

"The Flintstones" and "Rawhide" have squeezed "International Showtime" into limbo. When "Rawhide" returns next year, it will have a different look when Clint Eastwood takes over as trail boss from longtime partner Eric Fleming who is being dropped from the show. It will also move from Friday to Tuesday night.

"12 O'Clock High" too is moving away from Friday — the most lonesome night of the week to TV moguls — to Monday evenings.

"The Farmer's Daughter" with Inger Stevens will survive. The blonde heroine will marry her boss on the show next year. But Cara Williams will get the hook as will Tony Franciosa and is "Valentines Day."

"Slattery's People" received an eleventh - hour reprieve and will return in the fall. Top-rated Jim Nabors and his wacky "Gomer Pyle" antics will be back as the king of Friday night viewing.

Peavish Jack Parr finally will keep his word and leave television for good, raising cheers in some quarters and tears from many a lonesome matron.

Zone Code May Move To Counsel

Marin County supervisors resolved yesterday to take prosecution of zoning and building code violations out of the district attorney's office and turn it over to the county counsel.

Only reservation in the motion by Supervisor Ernest N. Kettenhofen was that the legality of the move be checked.

The board agreed that this was not a criticism of District Attorney Bruce B. Bales or his office. Supervisors said the violations were not usually made with criminal intent and also it was almost impossible to set aside prosecution of conventional crimes in favor of zoning or building violations when the work load is heavy in the district attorney's office.

Bales said he favored the idea but doubted its legality.

Officers Elected At St. Hilary's

Frank J. Ryan of Tiburon has been elected president of St. Hilary's Parish men's club.

Other officers are Jeff Knight, vice president, and Al Agajan, secretary-treasurer.

Father William Mena was appointed moderator of the society by Father John Murray, pastor of St. Hilary's. Roland Demarais was appointed program committee chairman.

The next meeting of the group will be held in Lydon Hall July 11.

Gets Arts Degree

Douglas A. MacRae, son of Mrs. Michael Drost of 252 Redhill Avenue, San Anselmo, received an associate in arts degree at commencement exercises of Graceland College, Lamoni, Iowa, Sunday. The college is sponsored by the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints.

SWINGER ON SKATES

Comedienne Diane Morris shows the form she uses to lead a hootenanny production number in Shipstads and Johnson Ice Follies, which opens at Winterland in San Francisco Wednesday. The Independent-Journal is giving two tickets to the show to readers whose names are listed each day somewhere in the classified advertising section.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

Prostrate Cancer Offers Best Chances Of Hormone Treatment

VAN DELLEN

Cancer of the prostate is one of the few malignancies that responds to hormone treatment. This should be encouraging to the 33,000 victims who develop the condition every year. This does not mean that the male can write off this type of tumor. The condition is curable when diagnosed before it spreads beyond the capsule of the gland. It is controllable when recognized late even though the cancer cells have spread (metastasized) to bones, the lungs, and other tissues.

THE CAUSE of prostatic cancer is not known. Although it is prone to develope after middle life, most victims are between the ages of 50 and 80. Early recognition of the disease is easier said than done because the lesion seldom produces characteristic symptoms. The earliest manifestations occur when the growth is large enough to obstruct the opening of the bladder. The individual may have trouble urinating and the stream is reduced in size. Frequency occurs and it may be necessary to get up one or two times at night for urinary relief.

Statistics show that when this stage is reached, there is only one chance in 20 that the tumor has not spread beyond the capsule of the gland. The only way to diagnose the disorder earlier is via an annual rectal examination, especially after age 40. The physician is suspicious when the soft, smooth gland becomes firm, irregular, and nodular. Tests are made on secretions obtained by massage or a biopsy of the gland.

BLOOD TESTS, such as the acid phosphatase, aid in making the diagnosis. The level is elevated in 90 per cent of those with this malignancy. We also suspect this condition when sciatica develops in a man after he is 50 years of age. This may be caused by a spread of the tumor to the bone. X-rays of the spine and pelvis will demonstrate the metastases.

(Dr. Van Dellen will answer questions on medical topics if stamped, self-addressed envelope accompanies request.)

ENLARGED SPLEEN

A reader writes: What causes the spleen to enlarge? Could swollen glands be responsible?

REPLY

Enlargement occurs during some bacterial and viral infections as well as from parasitic disorders such as malaria. Cysts, tumors, and abscesses lead to swelling. Enlargement also is associated with a variety of diseases involving blood-forming organs. In some of these conditions, the glands are swollen.

HIDDEN-TYPE DISEASE

A reader writes: Is there a thing called hidden-type syphilis, and can it be cured?

REPLY

Yes, and a cure is available. Many do not realize they have syphilis until they develope symtoms denoting the secondary or tertiary stage of the disease. Others are surprised when a routine blood test is positive.

RIGHT NOW

M. M. writes: Will the time ever come when diabetics can do away with injections?

REPLY

Where have you been in the last 10 years? Several anti-diabetic pills have been under investigation and in use during this time. They are most helpful for those with mild diabetes.

BAD BREATH

A. T. writes: How do you get rid of halitosis?

REPLY

Sometimes good mouth hygiene will do the trick. Other cases need the attention of a dentist or an ear, nose and throat specialist. Send a self-addressed, stamped envelope for leaflet on foul breath and coated tongue.

Today's Health Hint—

Don't knock yourself out in hot weather.

Assurance Of Care Is Scientists' Lesson

Assurance of God's care for all is offered in the Bible Lesson entitled "God the Preserver of Man" which will be heard at Marin County's Christian Science churches tomorrow.

Bible readings include these verses from Psalms: "The Lord is high unto all them that call upon him, to all that call upon him in truth. . . The Lord preserveth all them that love him."

Red Hill School Site On Agenda

Final grading plans for preparation of the Red Hill School site will be presented to the San Anselmo School District board at 8 p.m. Monday at Isabel Cook School.

The board is scheduled to call for bids on the grading and drainage work only.

Budget matters will come up for discussion, especially the questions of whether to defer payments on the state loan for the Red Hill site and whether to support financially the San Anselmo city recreation program.

Wife Won't Request Sausalitan's Charges

No complaint will be filed against John David Hite, 40, Sausalito man arrested for alleged felony wife beating, according to district attorney's office records today.

The alleged victim, his wife, Irene, declined to prosecute, a spokesman said. Hite, of 121 Third Street, was arrested by Sausalito police Sunday.

Where Marin's Next City (May) Be Built

This high altitude view of southern Marin shows where the Frouge Corporation plans to develop Marincello, controversial planned city of 31,600 persons.

Profile Of A Marinite

Judge Gardiner Was Well Prepared For The Bench

By ROSS DAVIS

In a mighty short time, Samuel Whittier Gardiner has become known as a judge with a knack for cleaving rapidly to the legal meat of an issue—especially in corporate law and financial tangles.

It's a talent in keeping with his personal mannerism. He is a man of crisp, incisive language. He is aggressive and he is relentless.

Also he is sometimes accused of being jaunty, even cocksure.

BE THAT AS it may, Judge Gardiner, was already in full stride when he took the gavel last Aug. 28, he plunged into some of the courts' most involved suits, and hasn't noticeably tripped once since.

In explanation, also characteristically to the point, Judge Gardiner, 62, said that while judges often take office after a relatively brief period of law practice, he has had benefit of lengthy private experience.

"And most of that practice of 20 years has been in corporate matters," he added. "It was not criminal work and not personal injury cases, but instead mostly business law, corporate affairs and quite a bit of condemnation work."

TOO, JUDGE Gardiner was city attorney for three decades, resigning only with his court appointment by Gov. Edmund Brown to fill a newly-created fourth judgeship.

If there is another single clue as to what makes him function, it's his own explanation of why he became a lawyer in the first place.

"My primary motivation was neither money nor success," he declared, "because I couldn't stand to live with people without knowing what my rights were, so they couldn't say to me, 'You can't do this,' or 'You can't do that.' "

THE JUDGE also believes that motivation of politicians is altruistic.

"The vast majority of people think a person is in politics to get something out of it," he said. "This is completely and utterly untrue. Either conservative or liberal, these people are active because of a sense of duty, to utilize their abilities to the better cause of government."

"This is not to say they won't take rewards," he added. "They will. But generally this is not their motive."

A GREGARIOUS person by nature, Judge Gardiner frankly admits the early weeks of his new appointment were lonely ones.

It was, he said, a sort of "No Man's Land."

He could no longer indulge in the hearty and competitive byplay with former fellow attorneys; he wasn't familiar enough with his duties and new associates not to feel isolation.

FOUR MONTHS after becoming a superior court magistrate, Gardiner was also assigned the duties of being Marin County juvenile judge. He is prompt to point out his brief spell in that capacity makes him no authority on juvenile delinquency.

And he has no vast change in mind for the court, adding, "I'm not so sure it isn't going along pretty well as it is."

"Most of the public, nationwide, has the feeling now that getting tough with juveniles is needed," he said, "but this is not the overall answer to juvenile misbehavior.

"THERE ARE environmental problems, family problems, personal problems and idiosyncrasies of juveniles, and although real discipline and punishment must sometimes be administered, it must not be administered as the primary or standard solution. It is only a selective solution," he said.

Judge Gardiner, as do the other magistrates, has a walloping big week's schedule. Monday mornings he has probate matters. Each Monday afternoon he has law and motion. Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Fridays from 9 to 10 a.m. he has juvenile detention hearings.

Tuesdays through Thursdays from 10 to 4:30 p.m. he has regular trial matters. Wednesday mornings, 9 to 10, he has default matters.

FINALLY, FROM 9 to 5 p.m. each Friday, he has regular juvenile hearings, with interruption at 1:30 for mental and inebriacy hearings. Crowded into the above schedule, of course, must be the numerous conferences, writ studies and other out-of-court matters.

But lest his image be entirely that of rapier-like legal assaults, he is also the judge who most nearly gets his feet up on the bench.

And with his desk in private chambers, he succeeds in doing just that. He is also given to wearing suspenders, will talk about his love for debating—formal or otherwise—and fly-cast fishing.

HE WILL TELL you that pure happiness is backwoods pack trip interlaced with frequent campsite card games of bridge.

Born in Larkspur in 1902, he was youngest of eight children of Rev. James and Adda Gardiner. He was privately tutored by his father—a former assistant superintendent of Portland, Ore., schools—and didn't participate in public education until his junior year at Tamalpais High School.

He is graduate of the University of California, and in 1927 married Susan Fenton.

IN 1933, JUDGE Gardiner helped establish the San Rafael law firm of Martinelli and Gardiner. Later, in 1949, he was with Gardiner, Riede and Elliott, a firm he stayed with until his present appointment.

He was also active in Democratic politics; was chairman of the Democratic Central Committee on several occasions and was First Congressional District chairman from 1946 to 1948.

Too, he was attorney for Marin Municipal Water District.

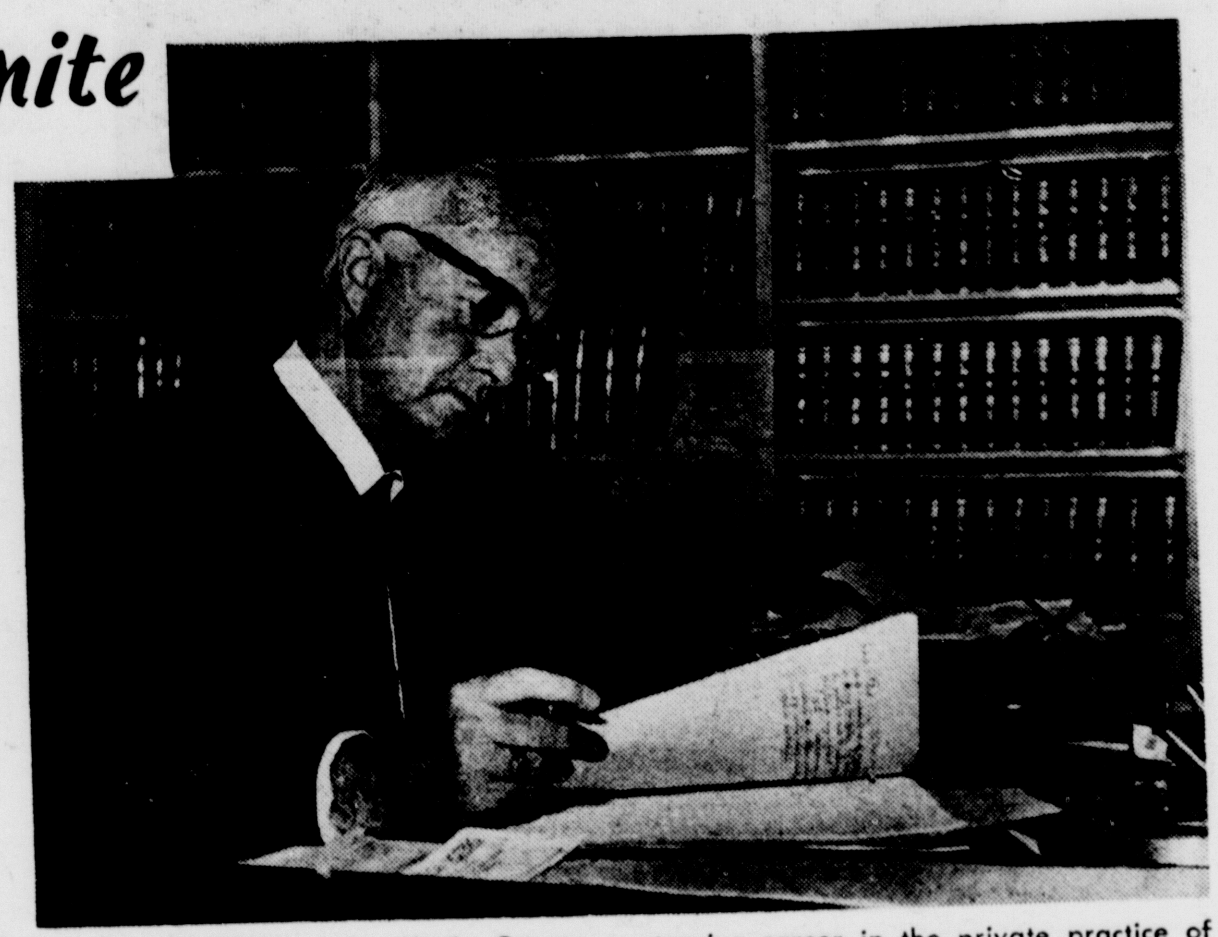

DURING LAST June's primary, he headed Alan Cranston's campaign for the U.S. Senate. He was also a delegate to the Democratic National Conventions of 1944, 1948 and 1952.

In addition, Gardiner served as president of Marvelous Marin in 1939-40, president of San Rafael Rotary, president of Marin County Shrine Club, and Marin Tuberculosis Assn.

He was likewise active in Boy Scouts, Red Cross, and Campfire Girls.

The Gardiners reside at 30 Fairhills Drive in San Rafael. They have three children, Diane, married to Eric F. Wilkinson of Terra Linda; Constance, married to Robert Birkie of Oakland; and Samuel W. Jr., married to Elenor and residing in San Francisco.

There are seven grandchildren.

IN HIS CHAMBERS at the Marin County Courthouse, Superior Court Judge Samuel Whittier Gardiner probes deeply into one of the cases before him. He was appointed to the bench last August after an extensive career in the private practice of law had provided him with valuable experience, especially in corporate and financial matters. How to be in . . . if you live in Marin

If you listen to KTIM's special programs, you've just got to be in, because you'll know everybody and everything that's going on in the county. Take "Marin Sounding Board", for instance. You'll hear people you know saying all kinds of things about politics, planning, education, the arts . . . and countless other subjects. We think you'll like the Sounding Board. Northwestern Savings and Loan does—they've been sponsoring it for eighteen years!

"What Happened To My Peau De Soie Gown?"

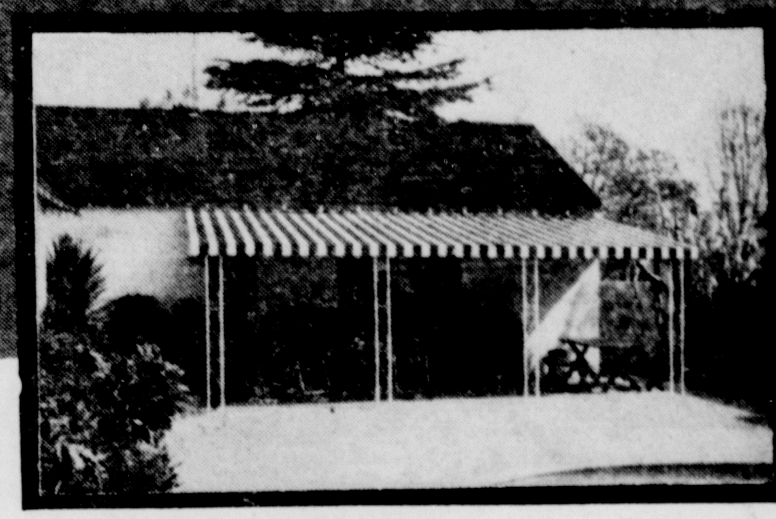

Peau de Soie is a glamour fabric of limited serviceability. It is glamorous because of its crispness and delightful sheen. The name Peau de Soie is French, of course, and means skin of silk. The fabric, however, may be made of silk, acetate, rayon or mixtures. Its crispness and sheen are heightened by use of sizings or finishes which, frequently, are non-permanent. Mechanical action of normal wear may crock the sizing, causing the fabric to lose body. Repeated cleanings will reduce the amount of sizing and the fabric becomes limp and bodiless.

Where sewn-in interfacings have been used as a dressmaking detail, Peau de Soie will hang in undesirable ripples due to loss of sizing. Resizing may restore some of the fabric finish, but you must remember that Peau de Soie is a glamor fabric and as such does not have the serviceability of more rugged fabrics.

AS PART of their study, home economics students at Redwood High School have been observing the behavior of pre-school children who have been reporting at the high school twice a week during the closing weeks of the current school term for nursery sessions.

The Tots At The High School

Redwood Students Observe, Learn From Nursery Class

By NANCY DICKSON

Drippy paint easels, cardboard boxes full of odds and ends of toys and half-dressed dolls, Dixie cups and 11 small children can all be found in the home economics room at Redwood High School.

And while the biology classes may be observing the behavior of guinea pigs, home economic students are observing the conduct of children of varying mental and physical developments in a nursery school situation.

The nursery school children have been coming to Redwood every Tuesday and Thursday morning for the past several weeks.

DURING THIS time, a group of five girls for each home economics period have planned and conducted activities for the children while the remainder of the class members observed them from a distance. Notes were taken, comparing the physical and mental development of each age group (3½ to 5 years), and studying and appraising the individual child.

According to home economics instructor Susan Fitzharris, the class has required only a little preparation in what to expect from children of different age levels because the high school students can generally draw critical conclusions from their own observations.

She also emphasized, "I try to stay away from the babysitting point of view."

Each class conducts the children in different activities.

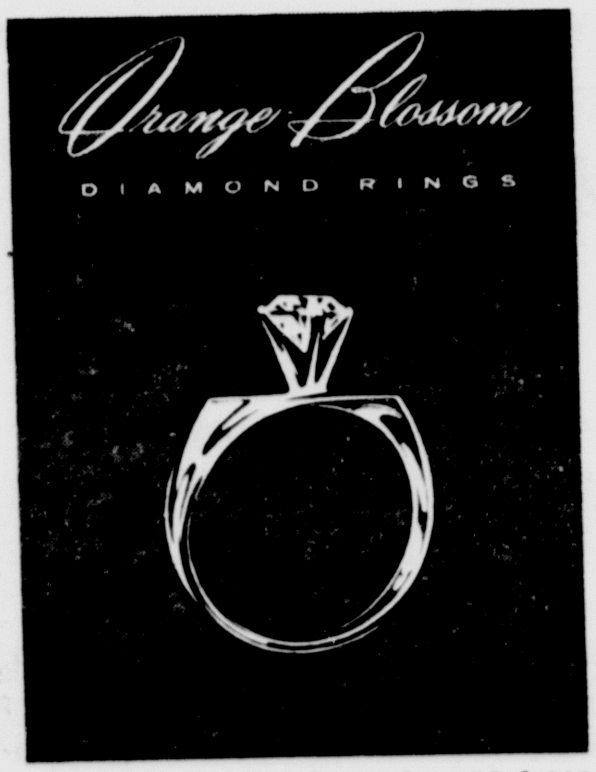

The early morning classes may include planting beans, making cookies and learning about domestic animals. However, seniors may be invaded by the pre-schoolers who come into the Senior Quad during second period to take a nature walk collecting leaves, flowers and bugs.

THIRD PERIOD is free play while during the fourth they tell stories, paint and do other creative activities.

It isn't unusual to see various faculty members guiding, with difficulty, their own children through the bustling crowded hallway of the high school during the morning, for eight of the 11 nursery children in the home economics class are the sons and daughters of Redwood teachers and administrators.

Those faculty children attending are Monica Kreps, daughter of Redwood Principal Donald Kreps; Tommy Bosque, son of Paul Bosque, director of student affairs; Gregory Wright, son of Webster Wright, counselor; Stevie and Mary Campagno, children of Anthony Campagno, counselor; Victor and Jenny Boucher, children of Mrs. Molly Boucher, physical education teacher, and Lisa Wylie, daughter of Robert Wylie, history teacher.

PROUDLY DISPLAYING a new two-tone green paint job, Northwestern Pacific Engine No. 112 shines like new at the Bethlehem Shipyards in San Francisco. The renovating of the engine, once a familiar sight in Marin County, was part of the program preparing the locomotive for future display at the Transportation Museum in San Francisco. Posing in foreground are Bill Silverthorne of Sausalito, retired locomotive engineer who served as a consultant; Fred A. Stindt, chairman of the Pacific Coast Chapter of the Railway and Locomotive Historical Society and author of the book "Northwestern Pacific Railroad" who was in charge of the project; Bill McKay, Bethlehem foreman who supervised the workmen, and Bob Thornhill, Bethlehem sales engineer.

No. 112 Is Ready For A New Career

Jaunty Little Locomotive Undergoes Renovation For Move To Museum

For many years, steam locomotive No. 112 was a busy Northwestern Pacific mainstay.

Its "home base" was Sausalito.

And it was a familiar sight to see little No. 112 hauling a line of passenger or freight cars between Marin and Sonoma county points.

THE ENGINE was built by the American Locomotive Works in 1908, and was the first new locomotive to be purchased by the Northwestern Pacific Railroad after the formation of that company in 1907.

No. 112 proved a versatile engine, being used in all phases of the railroad's operations—passenger, freight and work trains.

In fact, 112 was present as a key member of the construction train team when the railroad joined its northern and southern sections in the year 1914.

It was after the larger locomotives came into use in 1922 that Engine No. 112 was relegated to branch line freight service.

EVEN THEN, it was still a familiar sight in the Russian River, Sonoma Valley and Point Reyes areas, where, during the summer months, it was assigned to haul the heavy excursion passenger trains, arriving with a string of perhaps 13 passenger cars trailing behind "right on time" just as it had in the good old days.

The last operation of Engine 112 took place in 1951 at the head of just such an excursion train from Eureka to Samoa.

In 1952 the locomotive was donated to the Pacific Coast Chapter of the Railway and Locomotive Historical Society. That organization has been active in collecting historical railroad rolling stock for the Transportation Museum soon to be constructed at San Francisco's Aquatic Park .

NO. 112 WAS stored at Tiburon until 1962, then moved to the Bethlehem Shipyard in San Francisco.

In recent months, Bethlehem crews, under the direction of Fred A. Stindt, railroad authority and chairman of the Pacific Coast Chapter of the Railway and Locomotive Historical Society, have been busy renovating the engine.

As a result, the locomotive now bears the appearance of the four passenger engines that, decked out in gay two-tone green colors plus colorful insignia and aluminum smoke boxes, were favorites of the line back in 1922 when Edward Maggard was president of the Redwood Empire Route of the Northwestern Pacific.

BETHLEHEM workmen completed the renovation last month, and expert Stindt termed their efforts "a masterful job."

No. 112 will run no more. But its career is far from over.

The jaunty little locomotive will be stored indoors until the Aquatic Park Transportation Museum is ready to receive it. Then it will be placed on permanent exhibit there, to be admired by the public and to serve as a reminder of those colorful days when steam and rail were essential elements in the transportation patterns of the Bay Area.

The Salvage Shop And Its Eight Adopted Children

Foster Parents' Plan Just One Interest Of Sausalito Project

The colorful little Sausalito Salvage Shop marks its 25th anniversary next week, its staff still intent upon their goal of doing something for others.

The thrift shop at 19 Princess Street, Sausalito, annually contributes more than $7,000 to a long list of diversified charities, deriving those monies entirely from the sale of merchandise that has been donated to the establishment.

All such proceeds go to the worthy causes.

FOR INSTANCE, donations for the year ending Sept. 30, 1964, were distributed among:

American Cancer Society, American Red Cross, Arthritis and Rheumatism Foundation, CARE, Diabetic Youth Foundation, Enchanted Hills Summer Camp for Blind Children, Family Service Agency of Marin, Florence Crittenton Home, Foster Parents' Plan, Girl Scouts, Guide Dogs for the Blind, Hanna Boys Center, Humane Society of Marin County, Marin Assn. for Retarded Children.

Marin County Heart Assn., Marin County Society for Crippled Children and Adults, Marin Museum Assn., Marin Tuberculosis and Health Assn., Mount Zion Hospital pediatric clinic, Muscular Dystrophy Assn., National Foundation, Needlework Guild of America, Richardson Bay Recreation, Salvation Army, St. Elizabeth's Infant Hospital, San Francisco Suicide Prevention Inc., Sausalito Fire Department, Sausalito Little League, Sausalito School District welfare fund, Sonoma State Hospital, United Bay Area Crusade and the United Cerebral Palsy Assn. of Marin.

IF THERE IS any one project that gives the volunteers who donate their time to make the non-profit shop function so smoothly as a community program a special glow of satisfaction, it is probably the Foster Parents' Plan.

In 1964, $1,375 was expended on eight foreign orphans.

Through the years, the salvage shop has provided assistance for 35 hungry foster children representing 14 countries—Korea, Britain, Greece, Germany, Poland, France, Hong Kong, China, Czechoslovakia, Belgium, Holland, Italy, Vietnam and Colombia.

Little Koreans have been the chief beneficiaries, 12 of them having been assisted.

WROTE KATHERINE B. Slevin, assistant director of Foster Parents' Plan, Inc., from international headquarters in New York to Mrs. John C. Alexander, chairman of the Sausalito Salvage Shop:

"Congratulations on your 25th anniversary. We might add that you have been in the business of salvaging hungry children as well as the other wonderful causes you have helped to salvage . . . Please accept our heartfelt thanks for all you have done for so very many, and for continuing to give security so that these children may look forward with hope for the future."

For five years, Mrs. Harry Mohler acted as "chief foster mother" for the Sasualito group, writing letters at least once a month to each child, and reporting to the volunteers on the correspondence at their meetings. In March she relinquished that responsibility to Mrs. H. T. Rogers.

The Mohlers are currently on an Asian tour. And Mrs. Mohler demonstrated that she had not forgotten the salvage shop back home in Sausalito, or the work that it is doing.

From Hong Kong, she wrote her friends, she and her husband visited with Chan Chung Wo, one of the thrift shop's currently adopted foster children.

"CHANG GOES TO a Buddhist school in the mornings with Foster Parents and the government sharing the tuition. He was fifth in a class of 45 in a recent examination," she reported proudly.

The Mohlers also visited another Hong Kong youth, Man Tin Kay, formerly assisted by Foster Partnts' Plan funds from the salvage shop until he reached the mandatory age at which such aid ceases. The Mohlers have since helped Man Tin Kay directly.

Mrs. Mohler described him as "a charming 18-year-old who overwhelmed us with attention. His manners were beautiful . . .

"He came to the plane with us yesterday, bringing a present of a sack of potato chips and peanuts which his father sells.

"ALTOGETHER IT was a most satisfying visit and I wish we were going to Saigon to see the two children there, too."

For its overseas children, the salvage shop pays $180 per year each, plus a cash gift at Christmas time.

Locally, the volunteers note, it is also children who enlist their greatest sympathy and receive the major attention.

The salvage shop itself got its start back in 1940 with the remnants of a "Bundles for Britain" bazaar. Briefly known as British War Relief, the name was changed to Allied Relief Salvage Shop with the entrance of the United States into World War II, and proceeds went to many nations and wartime causes.

After V-J Day, the group of housewives who were operating the establishment changed the name to the present Sausalito Salvage Shop and began working on behalf of a variety of charities.

OVER THE PAST 25 years, they have raised more than $150,000 for such causes, all from the sale of discards.

Contributions to the shop, incidentally, are tax deductible.

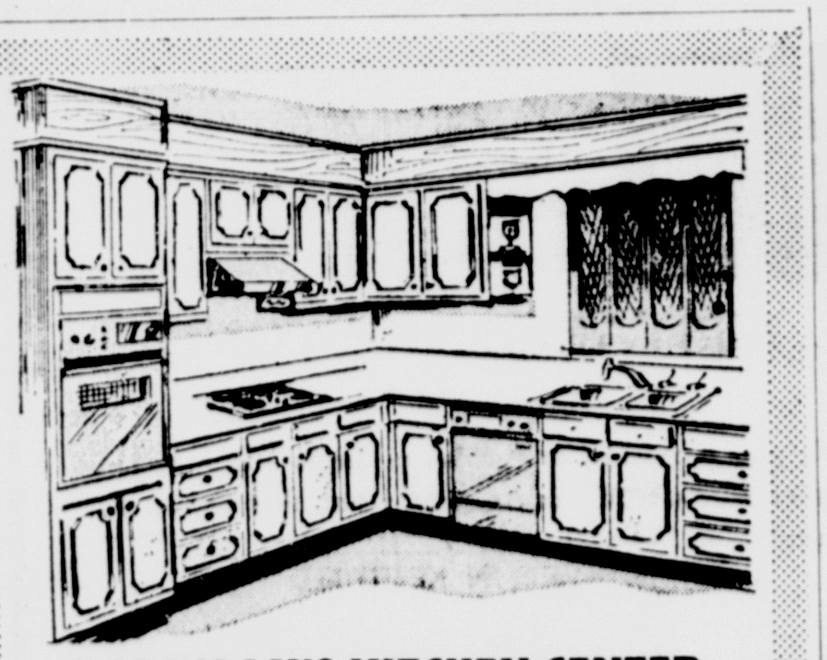

Observance of 25th anniversary week at the shop opens Monday at 1 p.m. with ceremonies that will include Sausalito Mayor Jan Paul Dyk and other dignitaries acting as honorary volunteer salesmen. Fresh merchandise will be placed on sale twice a day throughout the week-long open house during the regular shop hours of 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. daily and 7 to 9 p.m. on Wednesday evening.

STOVES FROM ANOTHER era, donations to the Sausalito Salvage Shop certain to appeal to antique seekers, also attract the attention of these three volunteers at the shop—left to right, Mrs. Charles Henderson, 84-year-old Mrs. Herbert Ward and Mrs. Edwin S. Long who is one of the founders of the shop that supports children overseas under the Foster Parents' Plan and contributes to a number of Bay Area charities as well. (Independent-Journal photo)

THEIR TRAVELS have permitted Mrs. Harry Mohler, for 20 years a volunteer worker at the Sausalito Salvage Shop, and her husband to meet many of the overseas children that the shop has benefitted through its Foster Parents' Plan contributions. Here they were photographed in Rome with little Eugenia Sciunnach. They are currently touring Asia and contacting additional foster children of the salvage shop.

THE PLANTS in which San Rafael High School was begun back in August of 1888 and in which it operates today are shown on this page. At bottom of the page is the Fourth Street Grammar School, in which the newly-organized high school class first occupied one-room quarters and was taught by Francis E. Crofts. Soon the trustees had built the adjoining two-story wing containing two rooms to house the high school program. It was not until the fall of 1899 that the high school was moved to a newly-constructed building at Fourth and E streets. Then, in 1924 the cornerstone was laid for the present plant, shown at the top of the page as it looks today.

San Rafael High—Today And Yesteryear

By BRYCE ANDERSON

The graduation exercises for the some 470 members of San Rafael High School's class of '65 will be a far cry from the first San Rafael High School graduation 74 years ago.

That historic commencement program, held in Gordon's Opera House on June 5, 1891, featured nine addresses by students—apparently one by every member of the graduating class. Their subjects indicate what was taught in the high school three-quarters of a century ago.

Margaret H. Smyth spoke on "Colonel Newcome as a Typical English Gentleman." Walter N. Ross's subject was "Sparta and the Spartans." Nellie Miller discussed James Russell Lowell.

Ellery B. Moore spoke on "Iron," Frank E. Ross on "A Page From the Earth's History," Chrissie Mann on "Current Literature," Olcott Haskell on "Water," Mary Elliott on "Subjects of Conversation," and James J. Connolly on "Story of Arctic Explorations."

THE PROGRAM of that first commencement was found in the Marin Journal of June 11, 1891, by Mrs. Rodney Wagner in preparing a history of the high school for the San Rafael High School Parent-Teacher Assn.

Mrs. Wagner also turned up much other interesting material about San Rafael High School's past.

The first class of the high school met on Aug. 6, 1888, in a single room of the Fourth Street Grammar School. C. S. Smythe was principal of both high school and grammar school. Francis E. Crofts was his assistant and taught the high school subjects.

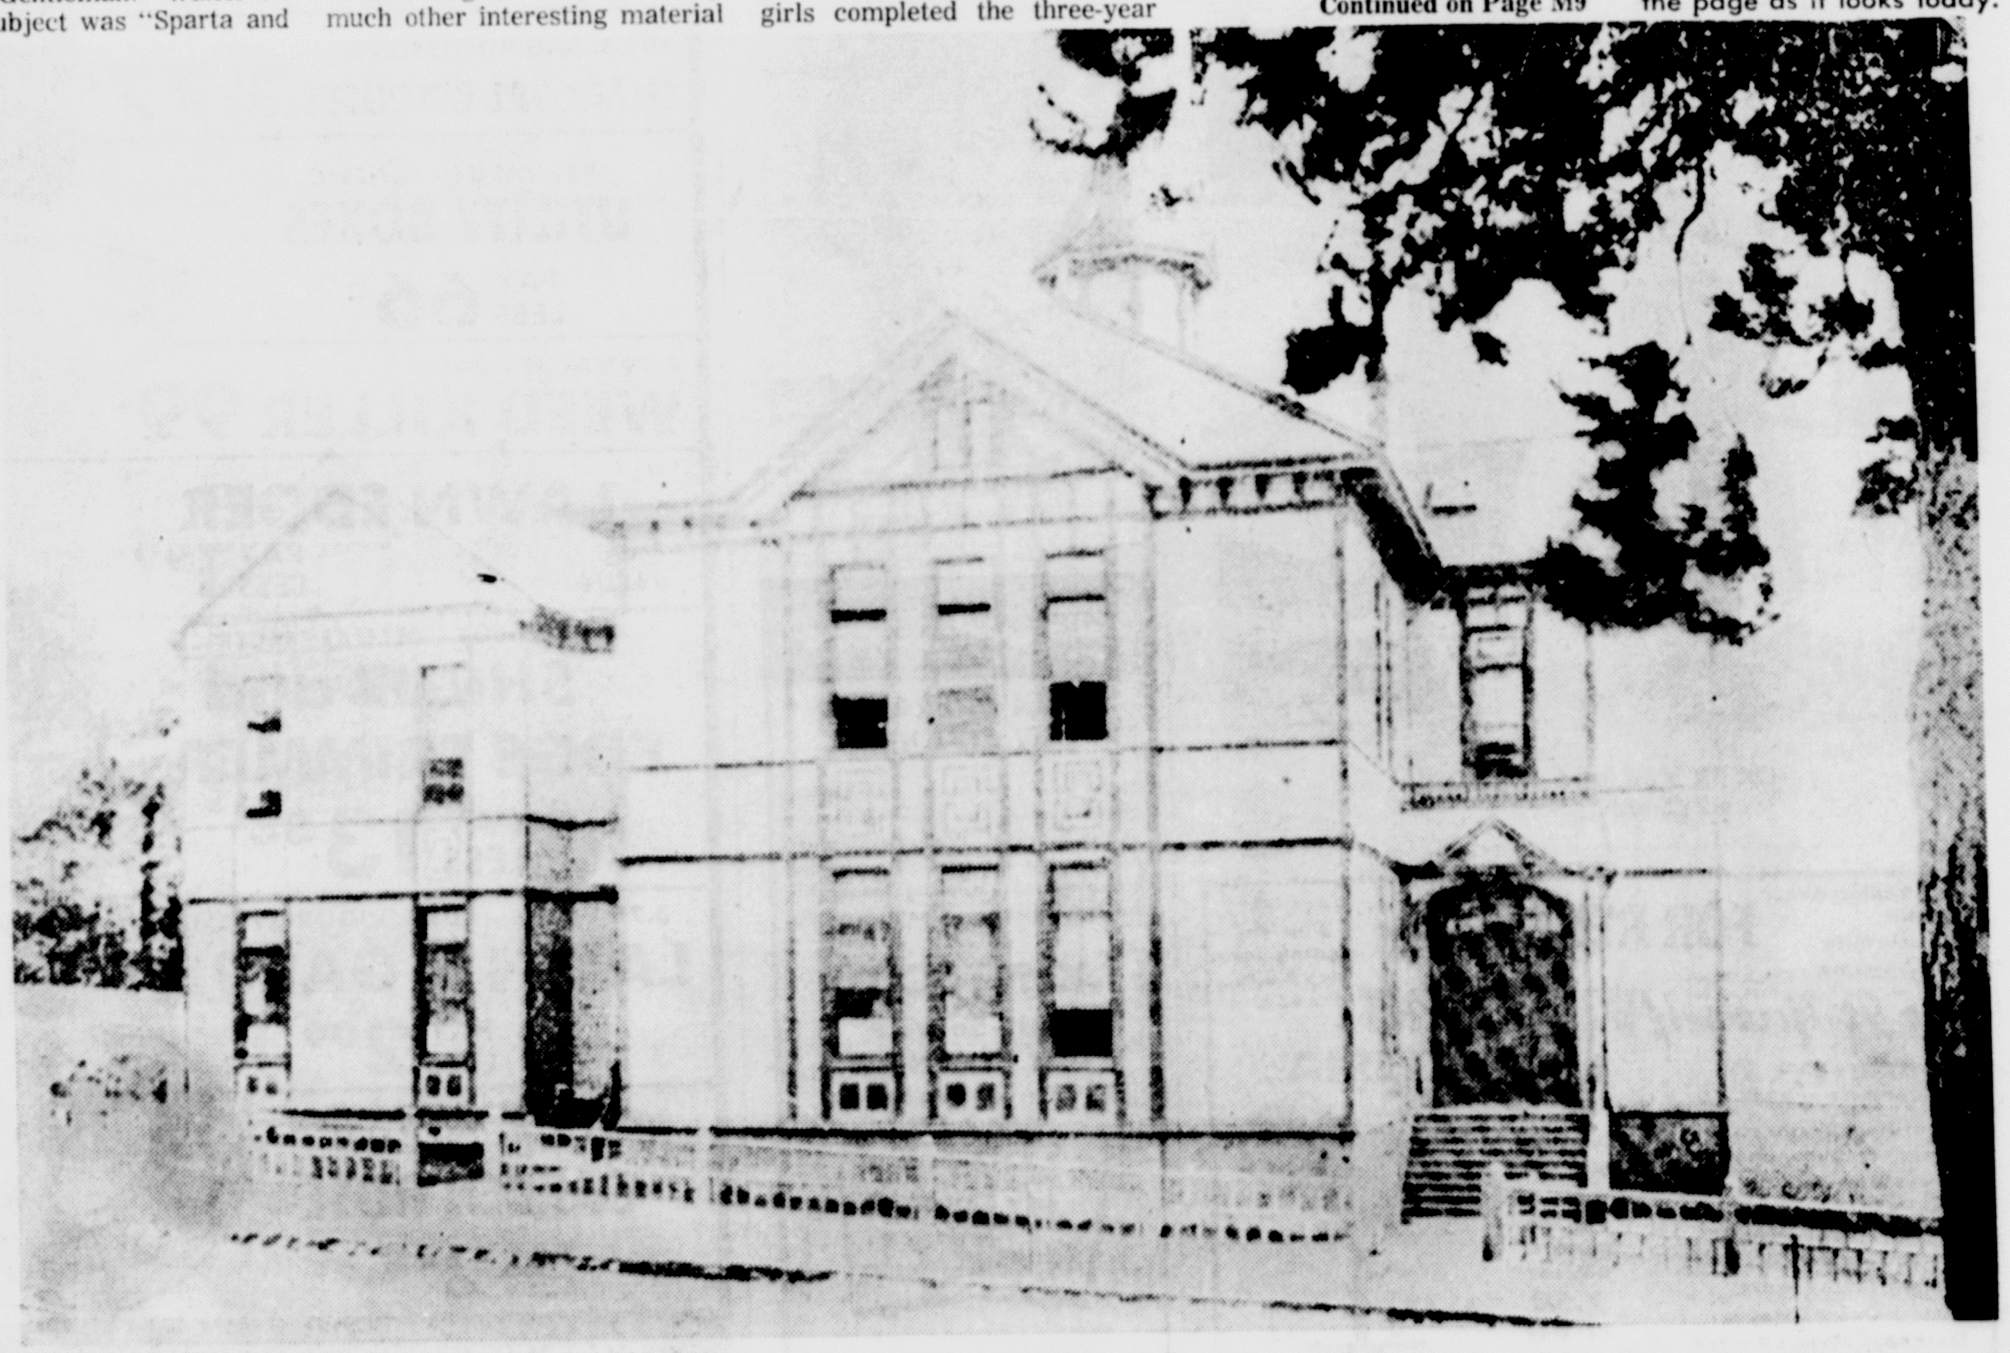

Mrs. Wagner was unable to learn the number and names of the students in that first class. However, as it finished its first year in the spring of 1889, it consisted of five boys and six girls. Apparently, from the program of the first graduation, all five of the boys and four of the girls completed the three-year high school course.

COMMENTS MRS. Wagner, regarding the first graduation:

"The graduation speeches reflect the scholarly atmosphere of the early high school and its classical curriculum. The first California high school was established in San Francisco in 1856 with a curriculum that included algebra, geometry, ancient and modern history, literature, physics and chemistry. San Rafael High School opened 22 years later with identical curriculum except for the addition of Latin."

In 1893, Greek and German were added. In 1895, San Rafael High School instituted a course in economics. About the same time, United States history was added, resulting from a request by University of California that this subject be included in high school curriculum.

"The first departure from a classical curriculum came in 1899 with the addition of a commercial course," writes Mrs. Wagner. It proved immediately popular, 17 eighth grade graduates enrolling in it. Subjects included bookkeeping, typing, commercial law and business arithmetic.

THE FIRST ART course also made its appearance in 1899, when freehand drawing was offered.

"Without question, emphasis in these early days was on scholarship," writes Mrs. Wagner. "Difficult and very comprehensive examinations were required for promotion from grade to grade."

Even the extra-curricular activities were of scholastic nature. The major activity of San Rafael High centered around a debating society, called the Congress, which was begun in 1893. When the first inter-school debate was staged on Nov. 25, 1899, it was held in the opera house.

The subject was: "Resolved, that the members of the cabinet should hold seats in the House of Representatives and be granted full privileges of membership." Three girls from Oakland High School argued the affirmative; the San Rafael team of Alfred Blumenthal, Henry Boyen and Irving Magnes took the negative and won the decision.

ANOTHER EARLY extra-curricular activity was the school's monthly publication, the Searchlight, of which Grace Livingston of the class of 1900 was first editor-in-chief. By 1907, the Searchlight had become the school annual.

Physical education was not required in those days. The high school had no gymnasium and little playground. However, inter-school sports were not long in appearing, baseball being the first with San Rafael admitted to an academic league in 1899.

The school begun in one room of the Fourth Street Grammar School did not remain there long. The school trustees immediately began building a two-story wing, at cost of $2,000, for the high school classes. Apparently it consisted of only two rooms, however: One on each floor.

THERE WERE still no laboratories, however. Chemistry experiments were conducted in the office.

By 1893, a problem appeared that has been recurring ever since: crowding. On July 8 of that year a bond election was held to authorize funds to build a high school. It lost.

"By 1895 high school classes were overflowing into the halls, the office, the basement and anterooms," writes Mrs. Wagner. "With the extension of the high school program from three to four years in August, 1897, something had to be done."

During the next Christmas vacation the schoolhouse attic was converted into a physics laboratory. This, says Mrs. Wagner, "was not only sweltering in the summer, but was a death trap in case of fire. The room was partially lighted by two roof windows that leaked when it rained. There was little storage space for laboratory equipment, and the single blackboard was only four feet square.

"THE CHEMISTRY laboratory, an enclosed portion of a hallway, was little better. . . . A draft hood for carrying away the fumes . . . worked only when the furnace was working."

By early 1898, with 60 students in the high school, plans were finally drawn for a high school building. It was to contain an assembly hall, six recitation rooms (one of which would be used temporarily for a public library), and two laboratories. It was estimated to cost $15,000. Writes Mrs. Wagner:

"The school bond election was set for April 2, 1898. When that day arrived, lessons were forgotten. Every boy in the school who could get possession of a horse did so, and drove the voters to the polls. That night eager pupils gathered around town until the ballots were counted, the bonds were carried and the students could have their new school.

"WORK WAS begun immediately on the old cemetery property at Fourth and E streets, but before the building could begin, bodies had to be removed from the site. . . . The foundations . . . shortly began to sink into the improperly filled graves. As soon as this problem was remedied, progress on the building was rapid."

Plans for the school apparently expanded considerably after the proposal was first put before the people, for when it opened in the fall of 1899 it had 15 classrooms plus a combination gymnasium-assembly hall (an early version of the "multi-purpose room").

However, drawing was added to the curriculum that year and had to be held in the auditorium-gymnasium.

A History Of San Rafael High School—

ONE ASPECT OF the history of San Rafael High School has been the continuing construction effort to keep pace with the growing enrollment and expanding curriculum. Even now this project is under way, and will bring the school plant capacity to what is seen as its maximum enrollment figure of 2,100 students. (Independent-Journal photo) added in 1900, when the enrollment was about 100 and the faculty numbered five, including the principal and two part-time teachers.

RECORDS OF 1901 show that J. F. Drew, teaching only from 8:30 a.m. to 12:25 p.m., taught algebra, advanced algebra, plane geometry, solid geometry, trigonometry, physics and chemistry—all for a salary of $70 a month. Another part-time teacher got $10 a month for teaching one subject. Two full - time teachers were paid $100 per month, and the principal drew $115.

Although the city was growing, San Rafael High School struggled along in its E Street School with little change through the next few decades. There was agitation for adding more vocational courses, but they were rejected by the school board for lack of room.

"A report published on April 25, 1922, revealed that the school situation in San Rafael was critical," writes Mrs. Wagner. "The high school building and equipment were rated as perhaps the poorest in the state for a city of comparable size. . . .

EARLY THE following year the parents took up the fight for better schools and in the Parent-Teacher Bulletin an editorial, urging parents to vote for school bonds, denounced the schools as ramshackle, overcrowded, ill ventilated and unsanitary. Revelation of the shocking facts about the city's schools apparently had its effect on the citizens of San Rafael. A $500,000 high school and elementary school bond issue was carried by a vote of 10 to 1.

"The Eagle Rock site, bounded by Mary, Third and Laguna streets and Mission Avenue and consisting of 29 acres, was purchased at $700 per acre for a new high school site. The ground breaking ceremonies were held . . . in December, 1923, and . . . on Dec. 13, 1924, the cornerstone of the new high school was laid."

That was the beginning of the present San Rafael High School building. As originally constructed, it contained 25 classrooms, a study hall, a gymnasium (in what is now the auditorium) and a little theater. Rooms were especially designed for music and art departments. The board of education had its office in the building.

ABOUT $400,000 of the bond issue was used in building and equipping the high school.

Writing in 1963, Mrs. Wagner reported of San Rafael High: "Today its plant is valued at approximately $2,863,000. Two modern buildings have been added: A building that is used for science (and one that) houses a very up-to-date kitchen and cafeteria and many well-lighted classrooms. The athletic department now boasts two gymnasiums, a swimming pool, tennis courts, a football field, ample room for track meets and a baseball diamond."

Further additions are under way this year. When completed, the high school will have facilities for what the board of education and superintendent envision as its permanent maximum enrollment: 2,100 students.

Mrs. Wagner noted that in 1927, San Rafael High School offered 84 courses. In 1963, it offered 94.

MISSING WAS the Greek added to the curriculum in 1893, although French and Spanish had been added along the way. Missing also was the debating society, with inter-school debates long a thing of the past for San Rafael High, although the football team plays under lights and there is even a course in golf.

The courses in ancient and modern history have been telescoped into a single world history course. But there is a new electronics laboratory, and such courses as woodworking, metalworking, sewing and cooking have long been fixtures.

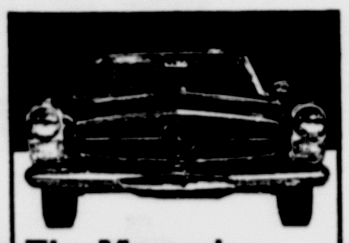

And it may be assumed that the two students selected from among nearly 500 seniors to speak at the 1965 graduation exercises next Friday will devote their talks to more topical subjects than "Colonel Newcome as a Typical English Gentleman" or "Sparata and the Spartans."

Miniature Golf Has Returned

Popular Sport Of 1920s Is Coming Back

By DON KEOWN

Many a Marinite can remember back into the late 1920s and early 1930s when the craze for miniature golf was sweeping the country.

But it may surprise some of them to learn that the interest in the game never died completely.

Miniature golf remained popular in spots, particularly in the resort areas of the East. And now there are indications that the game is enjoying something of a resurgence of interest across the country.

ONE SUCH indication is the popularity of Marin's lone miniature course — Greenbrae Golf on the east side of Highway 101 at the Greenbrae Interchange.

The 18-hole course was opened last August by Edna Jeffrey, as the managing partner, and her brother, Alfred A. Finnila.

Thus, 1965 will mark the first full year for the layout.

Mrs. Jeffrey is already confident, however, that the enterprise will be a success.

Why a miniature golf course?

MRS. JEFFREY answers: "A few years back I used to see the kids jumping on the trampolines, and I would think how much nicer it would be if they could have a sport such as miniature golf to interest them. And

THE GREENS AT Pebble Beach were never like this. But the roller-coaster terrain for this hole on the Greenbrae Golf course at the Greenbrae Interchange of Highway 101 is all part of the fun and challenge of miniature golf for Ramona Johnson, left, and Sonjia Finnila.

KENT JEFFREY, left, assists his brother, Brian, in the recovery of golf balls from the small house on the 18th and final hole of the Greenbrae Golf course. The youths are the sons of Edna Jeffrey, co-owner and manager of the course, and it was Kent who designed the electronically-operated 18th hole system that awards free games for a hole-in-one.

A New Generation Is Discovering The Fun Of This 'Happy Game'

we knew that a friend of my brother had put one in in San Francisco successfully."

Finnila, a civil engineer, originally had leased the property at the interchange for the storage of construction supplies and equipment, then discovered that, because of its proximity to the highway, he was not permitted to erect permanent structures upon the land to shelter the materials from the elements. Another nearby parcel was acquired for storage purposes. And it was decided to devote a half acre of the acre and a half Finnila had leased at the interchange to a miniature golf course.

The initial design for the course was drawn by one of Mrs. Jeffrey's two sons, Brian, now 17, using as his general pattern a San Bernardino course upon which he had played and which he had enjoyed especially.

THE PARTNERS and their sons, however, also researched the subject of miniature golf, and visited other courses.

Final plans were drawn by Mrs. Jeffrey, subject to her engineer-brother's approval, and then a draftsman prepared the drawings from which the carpenter was to work.

The forms were prefabricated, then delivered to the site by the carpenter, the sons of Mrs. Jeffrey and Finnila and some other youths who were hired, and there erected into place.

Finnila did the paving with the help of the boys.

"THE BOYS really learned a lot of things about the operation of construction machinery and tools before we got through," Mrs. Jeffrey says. "They were driving dumptrucks, pouring cement and doing just about everything."

A major step was the winning of planning commission approval for such use of the land. This resulted in some delay, but approval was finally given and the project proceeded.

The 18 holes is the normal layout for a miniature golf course, just as it is for the larger links.

Much of the interest lies in the traps and other obstacles that are placed in the way of the miniature golfer. Bends in the fairway are the most common problem to confront him. But the miniature golf course traditionally must include such built-in obstacles as the now being constructed barn door that opens and closes, a windmill, the chapel, the clown's face, bridges, roller-coaster terrain, and the tricky channels that exist on the Greenbrae course to trap the unwary.

"IT LOOKS LIKE a simple course, but the appearance is deceiving," Mrs. Jeffrey declares. "It is really quite challenging."

One major addition is the small house into which the golf ball disappears on the 18th and final hole.

Designed by Mrs. Jeffrey's oldest son, Kent, 21, it is electronically operated so that when a hole in one is scored there, the player receives a ticket for a free game.

"It adds a lot of interest," Mrs. Jeffrey says, "and it also serves the purpose of safeguarding our supply of golf balls. Until it was built, we were losing a lot of balls after that 18th hole."

THE ENTERPRISE was launched with 200 golf clubs, all putters, in three sizes, both righthand and lefthand, and very few of those have been broken. Which indicates that miniature golfers generally have a better grip on their tempers than those who play the larger courses.

Mrs. Jeffrey, a realtor and a Christian Science Church reader, is assisted by her two sons in managing the course. Additional help has been employed for the summer which the Jeffreys expect to be a busy season.

Her nephew, Ronald Finnila, 24, also played a major part in the planning and the construction of the course.

"Greens fees" at Greenbrae Golf are 50 cents a game in the daytime, 75 cents per game on Sundays and evenings. A round usually takes about 30 minutes.

MOST OF THE golfers take their scores seriously, Mrs. Jeffrey says, trying to best each other, and the par for the course.

Daytime players are mostly youngsters. In the evening, the adults outnumber the children.

Friday and Saturday night crowds are made up largely of young couples on dates. Sunday is a family day at Greenbrae Golf with father, mother and the youngsters all playing together.

"THAT IS ONE of the nice things about miniature golf," Mrs. Jeffrey declares. "The whole family can play together and turn it into sort of a family outing."

Remembering back to Thanksgiving Day, 1964, she says: "I never saw so many fathers playing with their children—and having fun doing it."

Many of the fathers, she adds, use the miniature course in which to teach their sons and daughters the fundamentals of golf, particularly the stance and the grip for putting.

What is there about miniature golf that attracts its fans?

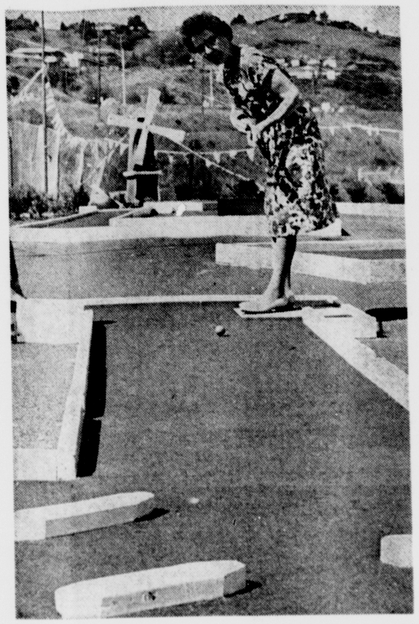

"MAINLY, I think," she says, "it is because it is such a happy game. People enjoy it and it takes them outdoors. Then, like I said, the whole family can participate. Even the smallest can take part in it."

Mrs. Jeffrey can remember when the miniature golf craze was at its height. "I was living in San Francisco, and, as a girl, I used to play miniature golf instead of going to the library to do my homework as I was supposed to do."

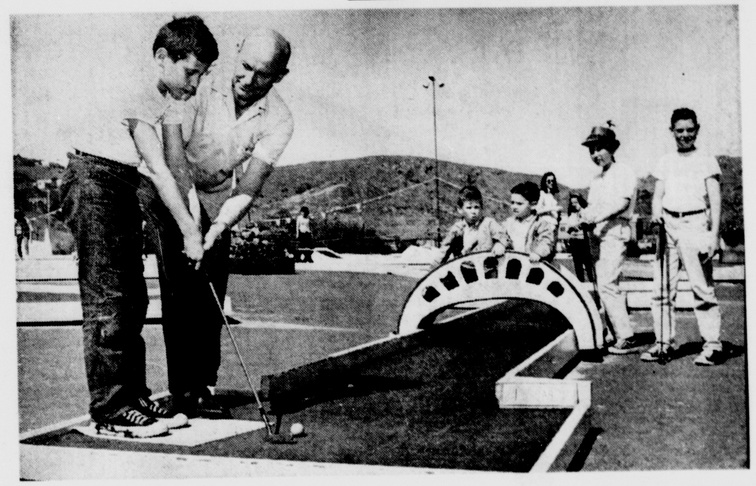

She does not expect miniature golf to again become "a big fad like it once was. But now the interest is more stable, and I think it will always retain its appeal—just like bowling."

With the close of school, the Greenbrae course will be open daily all day until 10 o'clock week nights and 11 on Fridays and Saturdays.

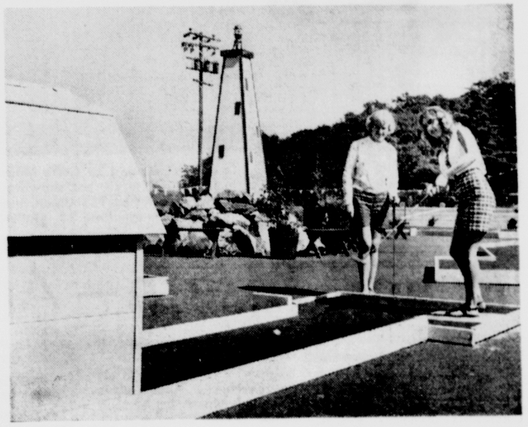

The course, naturally, is also open Sundays and holidays — "some of our biggest days."

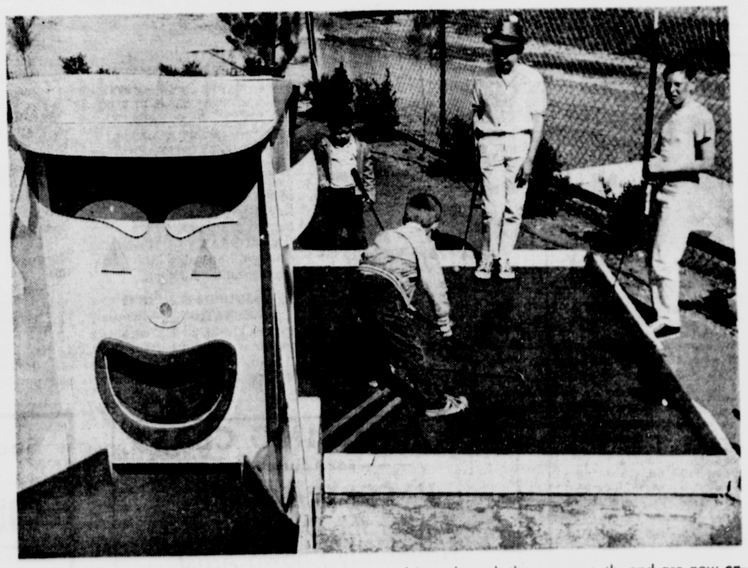

MEN, WOMEN and children alike enjoy the game of miniature golf. Here Mrs. Ernest Wehmar takes aim, hoping that her golf ball will catch the slanted wooden block and turn the corner. If it doesn't, she's in trouble. Note the replica of the windmill at the hole in the background. More such structures will be added at the Greenbrae course in the future.

STRUCTURES ARE a traditional part of the miniature golf course. The more obstacles the designers can place in the way of golfers, the more fun for the players. Here Sonjia Finnila, left, and Ramona Johnson are confronted with one such problem during a round on the Greenbrae Golf layout — Marin's only course of its kind.

THE CLOWN'S FACE at the third hole of the Greenbrae Golf course presents an inviting and cheery target for the players. These youngsters have driven through the open mouth, and are now engaged in the serious business of sinking their putts. They are Scyler Martin, Michael Schilling, Curtis Martin and Craig Sutley.

"BARN IN THE SUN" is the title of this painting by Corte Madera artist William Grant Sherry, included in the current showing of Sherry's work at the H. P. Galleries are open to the public Tuesday through Saturday, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. While Grant, who studied in Paris and London, has had many one-man shows, this marks his first such exhibit in San Francisco.

On The Stereo Scene

By JOHN SUNIER
KBRG Station Manager

Swinging the classics:

ANYONE FOR MOZART?—The Swingle Singers — Philips Stereo PHS 600-149:

Although the general idea is nothing new, the recent trend of "swinging the classics" started by the Jacques Loussier Trio ("Play Bach") and the Swingle Singers does have a number of worthy attributes.

Neither of these two groups actually change the notes of the original music, melodically or harmonically. They merely add a swinging beat and let the music go!

To do this vocally, as the Swingle Singers do, is a tremendous feat of musicianship.

Their latest tunes to the delightful melodies of Mozart, with singing versions of two sonatas for piano, the Variations on "Twinkle, Twinkle, Little Star," a Fugue, and Eine Kleine Nachtmusik. Their rhythm section has to adopt a somewhat lighter sound and the singers had to follow suit, as though they couldn't touch ground in their soaring vocal fantasies.

This third Swingle album is just as good as the first two prize-winners.

SWINGING THE BAND—The Ken Jones Orchestra/The Elizabethan Consort of Viols/Elaine Delmar/Geoffrey Emmott's Recorder Consort — ATCO Stereo SD 33-171:

This is the first of two new lps adding jazz music to the immortal words of William Shakespeare which have been set to music by composers ever since Thomas Arne. Both albums come, naturally enough, from England.

This one uses a fantastic variety of instrumental groups—two of them indigenous to Shakespeare's time—to accompany the vocals of Elaine Delmar, and to play six straight instrumentals.

The overture, "Strike Up the Bard," is a most unusual production, with the recorder consort joining the modern jazz band of Ken Jones. "Nine for Bacon" is an intriguing instrumental too.

The main negative point about this one is the voice of Miss Delmar—it's simply not up to the material.

SHAKESPEARE AND ALL THAT JAZZ — Sung by Cleo Laine with John Dankworth Orchestra—Fontana Stereo SRF 67531:

This second Shakespeare—jazz album benefits from the fine voice of Cleo Laine, although the backing is strictly a big-band jazz type, without recorders, viols and other Elizabethan instrumentation.

Two of the pieces are Duke Ellington's and British bandleader Dankworth has penned eight of the others. Ken Wheeler on trumpet is a fine soloist. Influences of both the Duke and Gil Evans can be heard in Dankworth's complex and worthy compositions.

Of special interest is the song of Titania in which Miss Laine sings all three of the Macbeth witches at once, via tape recording.

THE MEDIEVAL JAZZ QUARTET PLUS THREE—Classic Editions CE 1050.

This unique album is the idea of pianist-composer-singer and generally hip personality Bob Dorough, who has performed frequently at the Trident here in the county. While it has been out a while, it fits in beautifully with the current idea of swinging the classics and deserves more attention than it has received.

The music is not the classics, but such standards as "Lady Be Good," "September Song," and "Nature Boy," but the performers—that's a different matter. They play recorders, Baroque flutes, krummhorne, guitar, and finger cymbals, among other things.

Although recorders are devilishly difficult to play even on simple four-four rhythmed early music such as Dowland, Byrd and those other English cats, the "MJQ" swings through complicated jazz versions of these pop tunes without the slightest hitch—and what's more, they really do swing!

This lp is tough to find, but I do know that Discount Records has it.

FROM VIENNA WITH JAZZ! Friedrich Gulda, his piano and big band—Columbia Stereo CS 9051:

This effort is better classified as "third-stream music" than swinging the classics, although pianist Gulda had been shocking his classical listeners for some years with his jazz renditions.

This is a big, sprawling work that lasts some 29 minutes and reminds me of another similar work. Howard Brubeck's "Dialogues for Jazz Combo and Symphony Orchestra." It is not completely successful, but then few of the third-stream compositions have been thus far.

A similar, shorter work, "The Veiled Old Land," fills out Side Two of the album.

Stereo Hi-Fi

By C. J. Catania
Audio Engineer

How long does a recording on a tape last? Exact answers cannot be given at this time because the use of tape is only about 20 years old. Early tapes were not made with the precision and formulation developed through the years. However, tapes that I recorded some 15 years ago sound just as good now as when they were recorded. They have just as much signal now as when recorded. Storing them with no occasional winding and rewinding has not affected them.

Companies such as Minnesota Mining and Manufacturing Co., manufacturers of Scotch tape, have made tests subjecting recording tape to the equivalent of hundreds of years of use. The results of these tests indicate that there is very little wear, that there is no flaking of oxide from the tape, that there is very little tendency for tape edge curl when properly stored, that there is no tendency for plastic backed tapes to become brittle if properly stored, and that there is very little signal loss or noise build-up on the tape. The above comments apply only to high quality tape. Poor quality tape may have all of the above conditions.

Tape should be stored at room temperatures or at temperatures between 60 and 85 degrees, and at normal room humidities if it is of the plastic type. If it is of the Mylar or Polyester type, is can withstand wide variations in temperature and humidity without ill effects. If tapes are to be stored for long periods of time without use, they should be fast-wound before storing. The fast winding or re-winding causes a looser wind onto the reel; therefore, the tape will not be stored under strong winding tension. Strong winding tension can cause the edges of the tape to curl. Also, it can cause print through of signal to adjacent layers of tape. Tape should not be stored near any magnetic fields, such as transformers, electric heating appliances or any devices that carry strong electrical currents.

If the tape has become brittle from storage in a high heat area, it sometimes can be brought back to normal by storing it at normal room temperatures with a moistened blotter in the tape container. Do not let the water run onto the tape.

Modern tapes of the high quality type are manufactured under exacting tolerances. They have dry lubrication built in to prevent head wear, and are capable of providing you with excellent recordings for many, many years.

Memoirs Of Soviet Resumed

By DON KEOWN

Soviet Russia's leading literary figure, Ilya Ehrenburg, continues his memoirs with "The War: 1941-1945," covering those momentous years when his countrymen were engaged in their desperate life-and-death struggle with Adolf Hitler's invading military machine.

As with preceding volumes, this book is not offered as comprehensive history. It represents, instead, the recollections and impressions of one man. But he is a man intensely involved in the flow of history and the possessor of remarkable powers of discernment.

Not surprisingly, the Ehrenburg point of view, despite his international political beliefs, is strongly nationalistic Russian. He is impatient with the delay of the second front in the West as a means of easing the crushing pressure upon the Soviets, without considering the risk of failure and its fatal consequences for all the Allies that a premature move might have brought about. He condemns Munich without corresponding condemnation for the German-Russian accord. He accuses the postwar Churchill of triggering the Cold War with his suspicions without taking notice of Stalin's stubborn intransigence and duplicity.

Loyal Russian and committed Communist though he is, Ehrenburg, however, no propagandist and is not uncritical of his government, especially its domestic policies. He is and was acutely aware of the sinister aspects of Stalinism, and especially angry at the despotic yoke placed around the necks of writers and artists. Furthermore, his quotations reveal that he was courageously, almost foolhardily, outspoken at times, considering the political climate of his country, in making known his concern.

After absorbing Ehrenburg's graphic eye-witness accounts of the monstrous atrocities inflicted by the Nazi invaders upon the Russian population, the reader will emerge with a better understanding of lingering Soviet suspicions of a re-armed Germany.

He will be able, too, to place in better perspective the belief, long nourished in some quarters, that the Russians were guilty of criminal behavior when it came their turn to stand on enemy soil. Indeed, Ehrenburg makes a strong case when he contends that his countrymen exercised amazing restraint in their reprisals, considering the barbaric treatment to which their own loved ones had been subjected only months earlier.

Along with Ehrenburg's accounts of the savagery of the German invasion and his revelation of the infighting that took place inside Russia as he and other writers struggled doggedly against the Stalin bureaucracy for the privilege of telling the truth, the book is also noteworthy for the insight it offers on the Soviet intellectual's attitude toward other nationalities, and for the remarkable picture it presents of the Russians as the individuals, from generals to a heroic partisan girl, who survived the initial shock of the German assault and turned defeat into victory. It is apparent that Ehrenburg thought his people, through that show of courage, had earned far better treatment than that accorded them by Stalin in the immediate postwar period. And that the memories of such terrible sufferings have made the continuance of world tensions all the more bitter and incomprehensible to him.

IT TAKES a bold man to risk a reportorial reputation of the stature that John Gunther has achieved. But the veteran foreign correspondent does just that in his "Procession."

He reprints his "profiles" of the world's dominant personalities, written over a period of four decades for his "Inside" books and for magazines. He enlivens the collection by adding introductions setting the circumstances of the original articles, and by postscripts in which he brings the careers of his subjects up to date and evaluates his own perceptive abilities in the light of those later developments.

Gunther does not emerge unscathed. But where he has errored, he generally admits his mistakes fully and frankly. For instance, that he underestimated the sheer evil that lurked within Adolf Hitler, and that he painted Benito Mussolini in too great a stature. An exception is his failure to take due notice of Earl Warren's distinguished service on the U.S. Supreme Court, in contrast to the rather short shrift Gunther once gave the Californian's intellectual capacity.

The major figures of the mid-1900s are all there — FDR, Churchill, Stalin, Eden, Ghandi, Truman, Khrushchev, De Gaulle, MacArthur, Eisenhower, Chiang, Tito, Nasser, Nehru, Schweitzer, along with Hitler, Mussolini and such lesser but interesting lights as Dollfuss, Trotsky, De Valera and Cardenas.

If Gunther exposes his misses, he also shows amazing examples of perception. The reader receives not only an excellent "refresher" course in modern history through an expert's examination of the men whose ideas and personalities have fashioned the course of our times, but also an increased appreciation of the unique Gunther ability to look "inside" such men and appraise their motivations and aspirations.

SOMETHING different and timely in the way of a cookbook is Bill Riviere's just published "Family Campers' Cookbook."

The author is a former guide in the Maine northwoods, now editor and public relations director for the New England Family Campers' Assn. He's also a frequent writer in such publications as Field and Stream and Better Camping.

He has adapted his knowledge of the outdoors to the needs of the between 20 and 30 million family campers in this country.

Nucleus of the book, of course, are his recipes — from many sources. They come from veteran campers, from his fellow guides, from Indians, from Dakota cowhands, from Texas wetbacks, from the Girl Scouts and from Alaskan sourdoughs among others.

But there is more to the book than a collection of tasty and hearty dishes suited to outdoor preparation. There is also some expert instruction on fire-building, some evaluation of the various types of campstoves available and of the different fuels, discussions of the merits of other camping equipment, a chapter on tricks of the camp cook, etc. Even as some of his lore dates back into the pioneer past, Riviere remains fully cognizant of the modern equipment available to the camper today.

This very practical book looms as a real bonanza to the camping families.

AS ANYONE who has undergone the experience knows, the only practical method for reducing is to curtail your eating so that you are taking in fewer calories than you are burning up in energy.

It is important, of course, that the reduced diet include the nutrients essential to the maintenance of health.

And results can be improved by exercise that will step up your energy ratio.

These simple maxims are embodied in Dr. Morton B. Glenn's "How to Get Thinner Once and For All."

The president of the American College of Nutrition provides dietary advice plus helpful suggestions on good eating habits that will assist you not only in losing excess poundage but in then maintaining your proper weight.

A feature of this book not found in most other such volumes is some practical advice on how to fend with special problems—the party, the business luncheon, the craving for sweets, eating out in restaurants, odd working hours, etc.

One point Dr. Glenn drives home time and time again — if your new eating habits are to prove successful, there must be no cheating. Too many dieters, he tells us, simply fool themselves into believing they are complying with the advice of their physician. Calories have a way of slipping uncounted into our diets with catastrophic results.

"How to Get Thinner Once and For All" is a down-to-earth, helpful book by a medical man with a great amount of experience in the war against obesity, and with a record of success in those encounters.

TIMELY IS the publication by Diablo Press of "The Trouble in Berkeley" ($1.95, softcover).

Steven Warshaw has written "the complete history . . . of the great rebellion against the 'new university'," the new university being, of course, the University of California.

Warshaw's account is sympathetic to the student cause and anti-administration. But it is also lucid and persuasive, and clears up many uncertain points in the controversy.

The photographs and their reproduction are worthy of special mention. There is a large collection of photos, assembled from a number of sources. And in many ways, they tell us even more about the motives and the determination of this new generation of students than does Warshaw's very literate text.

THE JACKET DRAWING for John Gunther's new book "Procession" shows just some of the faces of the famous who are "profiled" inside its covers. 13 WAYS TO KILL A MAN edited by Basil Davenport, Dodd, Mead, 232 pages, $4. Reviewed by Don Keown.

Davenport has compiled and annotated a collection of 13 short stories of murder, each representative of a different method devised by man to do away with his fellow man.

The means by which death is inflicted range from the "commonplace" shooting, stabbing and poisoning to starvation and explosion. The authors include such names as Edgar Allan Poe himself, Roald Dahl and Stanley Ellin. And a good number of stories will be familiar ones to devotees of crime fiction.

The collection is generally a sound one, although in some cases it would seem that Davenport might have chosen more imaginative examples of a particular method of death-dealing. The editor's commentary upon the various categories of murder, covering both the real and the literary aspects, is entertaining, enough. The tales lean strongly toward the macabre, as crime short stories usually do to a greater degree than the crime novel.

SOME NEW BOOKS FOR THE JUNIORS

Some books for the younger readers:

The legend of the Negro who grew up with a hammer in his hand and helped build America is told in "John Henry" by Ezra Jack Keats (Pantheon Books, $3.50). Illustrated by the author, it is a short colorful book that traces Henry's story from the cradle to the building of a railroad and Henry's death by not being able to match a machine. It is a vivid story told in ballad style.

If kings are so great what did the great write about them? You can read about it from Rudyard Kipling to Archibald Marshall in "A Cavalcade of Kings" by Eleanor Farjeon and William Mayne (Henry Z. Walck, Inc., $5.95). There are black and white drawings to go along with imaginary stories and poems about imaginary kings and imaginary stories about real kings. The print is large and easy to read; probably at the earliest for third graders.

"The Kitten's ABC" by Clare Turlay Newberry (Harper, $3.50) is a lively introduction to the alphabet for the pre-school and just-starting-to-school set. It is a re-issue of a favorite first published 20 years ago, but with new pictures. Three-color watercolors show an assortment of fetching kittens and cats, accompanied by appropriate verse. Mrs. Newberry has been something of a specialist in kitten books for the small ones, and her work has been unfailingly popular with its intended audience.

At least some book publishers are becoming aware of the short count that has been given the Negro race in literature for junior readers, and are moving to fill that void. Case in point: "Runaway Slave" by Ann McGovern with drawings by R. M. Powers (Scholastic Book Services, 45 cents). This 64-page paperback for 7 to 9-year-olds tells the story of Harriet Tubman. And the author notes significantly that there was no previous book about the courageous woman for young readers. She also points out that Harriet Tubman's participation in the "Underground Railroad" parallels the risks and the determination being exhibited today by other brave men and women fighting and dying for justice. The story is told simply and movingly, without any effort to smooth over sectional feelings that might be ruffled.

Linell Smith, herself a breeder of fine horses and ponies, has put that experience and knowledge to good use in her book "The Auction Pony" (Little, Brown, $3.75). It is the story of the boy Nicky Davis and the Welsh poiny Guinevere, the latter thought to be unmanageable, the former not at all convinced of this. Along with her story, the author provides a great deal of information on the training and care of horses that should be of interest to young or aspiring equestrians. Illustrations are by Peggy Bacon.

Rutherford Montgomery puts his considerable knowledge of natural history to work in "Ghost Town Gold" (World, $3.50), an exciting adventure tale for boys about 11 through 14. The hero, Eddy, is 14, and in the all but deserted town of Granite where he lives just about his only friends are animals, a pack rat in particular. An influx of tourists and hunters threatens this peaceful sanctuary of his animal friends, and it is up to Eddy to find a way of protecting them and preserving the tranquility of his town. There is lots of action, and plenty of insight into the ways of wildlife.

"The Adventures of Davy West" by Matthew James, with illustrations by Nancy Grossman (Doubleday, $2.95), is the exciting tale of a 13-year-old boy alone in Apache territory where not only Indians, but bears, mountain lions, and starvation threaten him. A terrifying climax leads to success as the boy struggles to build a new life.

"Mission to Cathy" by Madeleine Polland, with illustrations by Peter Lana (Doubleday, $3.50), has as its setting 16th century China. Dressed in Buddhist robes so as not to offend the Chinese, Father Matteo Ricci with his servant, a young Chinese boy, travels to Siuching where the emperor has granted him land for a mission. Perilous adventure draws the two closely together at the moving climax, as Father Ricci faces suspicion and finally outright threats to his work.

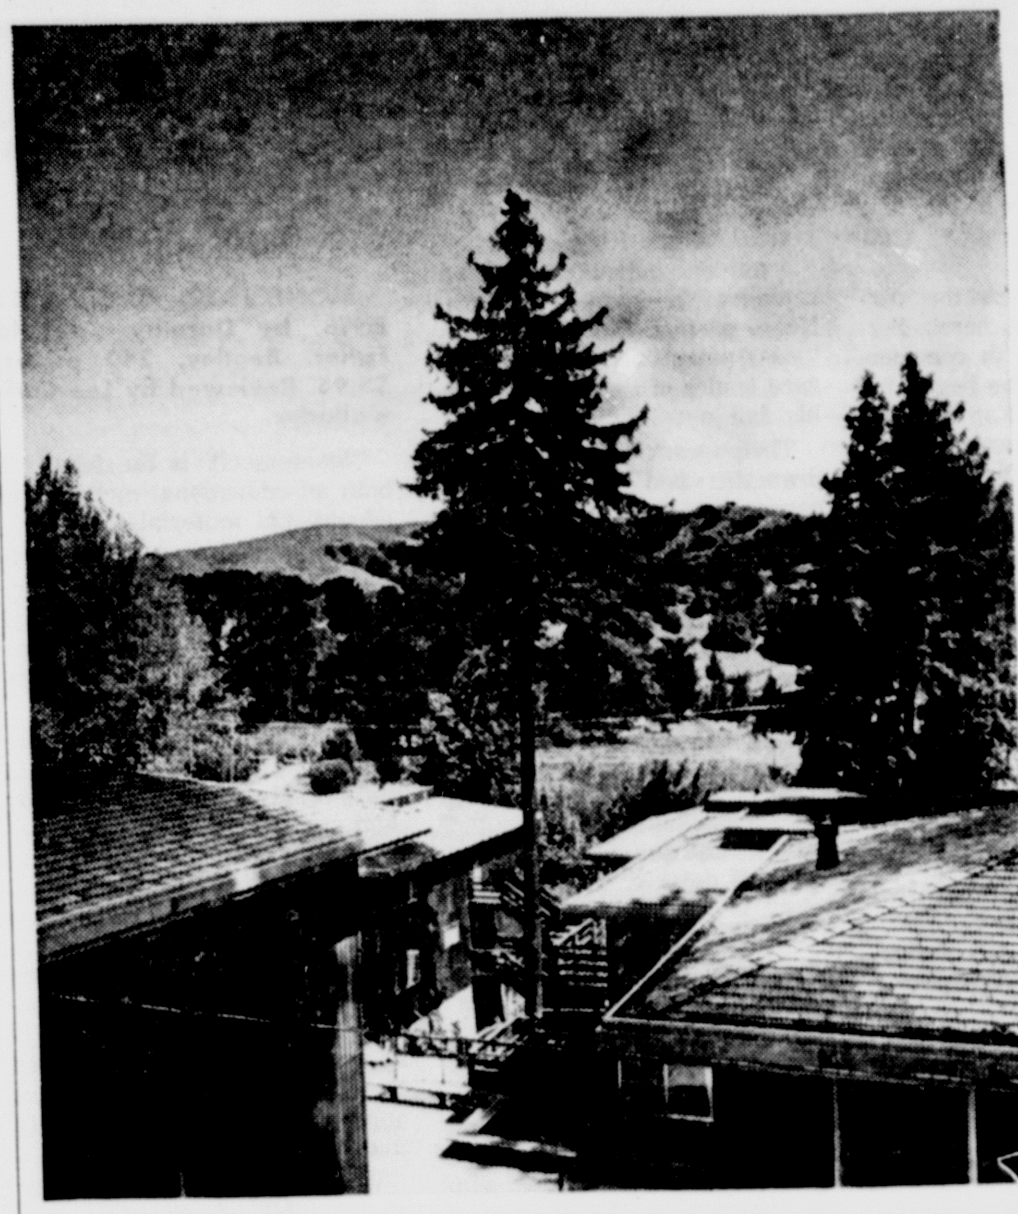

"The Mountain" by Helen Markley Miller, illustrated by Nancy Grossman (Doubleday, $3.35), is the story of a boy and of the frightening responsibilities he is forced to assume when his father is killed by an avalanche. When two men try to jump his claim to a valuable mine, Gordy and his twin sister have no choice but to ski the great and dangerous mountain if they are to head them off.

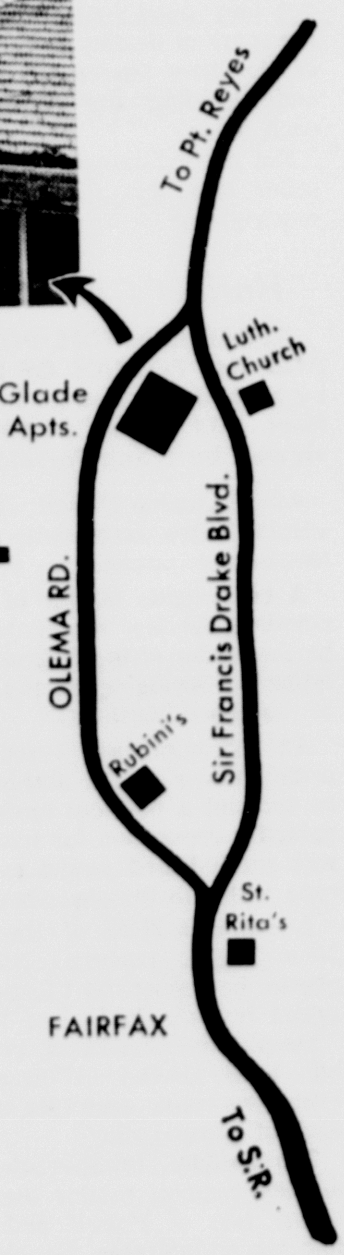

"The Light Across Piney Valley" by Mabel Watts (Abelard-Schuman, $2.95), is a charming, simple folk-like tale. It is boldly illustrated by Carol Barket in glowing color and imaginative design. The light appears to Luke in the early morning and seems to be a golden crown, which he decides he must get for his mother. As he sets out across Piney Valley he meets some animal friends who have their own ideas about the light. Children, 13 and older, will find this story delightful.

Biography sometimes has an uphill fight to win the interest of young readers but James Playsted Wood has an appealing subject in Sir Arthur Conan Doyle for his "The Man Who Hated Sherlock Holmes" (Pantheon, $3.75). Aiming at an audience 12 and older, Wood has not written down to his readers. He offers a full and literate account of the colorful life of the author-athlete-adventurer. The title itself should intrigue some young fans of Holmes, who while less numerous today still exist, as they ponder just why an author should be resentful of the character who made them famous. Wood supplies them with the answer.

ARTIST-AUTHOR Ezra Jack Keats, a favorite with young readers, has produced his illustrated version of the legendary "John Henry" with his hammer in his hand.

Priest And General

THE CROSS AND THE SWORD by Jonreed Lauritzen, Doubleday, 275 pages, $4.95. Reviewed by Jean Langham.

The historic work of Father Junipero Serra and Gen. Juan Bautista de Anza has been brought to life once again in an action-packed novel by Jonreed Lauritzen.

Their stories and those of the soldiers, Indians, missionaries, and colonists are vividly told and the reader is left with a desire to delve deeper into California's dramatic past.

Once again we feel the determination, dedication, and deprivation of the Franciscan missionaries as they pushed their way up from Baja, founding the missions whose names are so familiar to us now: San Diego, Carmel, Dolores. Once again we cross the scorching deserts, fear the Apache terror, relive the hardships and emotions of the 240 men, women, and children General de Anza led through Sonora from Mexico City to found San Francisco. Once again we greet the land of promise and legend, California.

Lauritzen recreates the personalities of the two heros, Serra and de Anza, with considerable insight. When he began his work in California, Father Serra was already 56 years old and lame; only a true passion could persist in the face of such continual obstacles as lack of communication with government controls in Mexico City, conflict with the military assigned to the missions, often limited progress with the primitive Indians.

De Anza, thriving on the hardships of the soldier's life, appears almost God-like in his fearlessness and his control over the soldiers and colonists. So unalike were these two men, yet they must have recognized the mark of destiny in each other, for they shared a common understanding and respect for each other.

Not a candidate for the best-seller lists, but good summer reading.

Harlem's Paradox

ADAM CLAYTON POWELL AND THE POLITICS OF RACE by Neil Hickey and Ed Edwin, Fleet, 308 pages, $6.50. Reviewed by Frank Farrara.

Adam Clayton Powell, controversial Negro congressman, is a fascinating puzzle.

A civil rights fighter of long standing, he lost his chance to be the leader of the Negro revolution by swinging to the side of the Black Muslims.

An accomplished legislator, prime mover of the anti-poverty act and a political force, he gained a reputation for frivolity with an ill-timed junket to Europe with two female aides.

A representative of Harlem, New York's poverty-stricken ghetto, he chooses to live in the grand manner in Puerto Rico.

Despite the paradoxes, Powell has been elected to Congress every two years since 1944, often without campaigning.

The authors, as the title indicates, present mostly the political side of Powell and his role as an agitator for Negro rights. They delve into the stormy Harlem past when Powell emerged as a leader in the late 30s, his struggles with the political power of Tammany Hall, and his work as pastor of Harlem's Abyssynian Baptist Church.

Although the role of leadership has fallen from Powell to Martin Luther King and others, the authors believe that Powell remains "a symbol" of the Negro protest. Powell, they say, "was potentially the greatest race leader of the century," and his fall a tragedy.

Their work is fast-moving, dramatic and intriguing, because they have captured the full flavor of Powell who is all of these, and then some.

Awful Clarity

THE GIANT DWARFS by Gisela Elsner, Grove Press, 309 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Laurel Shapiro.

A "contribution" the author calls it, and the reader will get the point quickly. A novel it certainly is not. Yet this book by a young German writer carried off the fourth Formentor Novel Prize, an international $10,000 award.

By any name, this is a book to be read, if at all, at intervals, the longer the better. Surely it could not have been the author's intent to sear the reader with one exposure to the unrelieved savagery of her satire. As a child's icy play-by-play of the actions of those giant dwarfs, the adults around him, everyday details build to terrifying nightmare structures, not without a wicked humor.

Miss Elsner lays it on with cold, straight strokes, creating an awful clarity. Detail by repetitive detail she squeezes the utmost horror out of the string of surrealistic episodes that make up the book. Exhaustively, relentlessly she bares man and his shameful works.

The reader is intrigued, repelled, overwhelmed, and very early on, bored to death. The strain of her stunning mosaic of details is considerable. Moreover, the reader has been this way before.

The early scene of the villagers consuming the father of little Lothar, the child narrator, brings back memories of Shirley Jackson's classic short story of the stoning. Gunter Grass, the pyrotechnical German author of "The Tin Drum" and "Dog Years," has been over this ground of brutal satire too, and his dazzling performances are hard to follow. One chips away too long and too hard at Miss Elsner's prose to be much relieved by the bizarre humor.

There is of course no plot, no character development or characters for that matter; in other words no human-sized emotions to involve the reader. He can approach this book in no other way than as a specimen under glass — a morbid reflection of human evil and folly held up, from a distance, for his inspection.

Obviously this was deliberate, for the author is abundantly gifted. The weaving of themes and sub-themes, the sleight-of-hand with her symbols, people and animals (surely she would list them the other way around) are the work of an artist of stature. Her distinctive piling on of detail after detail to a maddening repetition of meaninglessness is a tour de force.

Admirable as it is, this is a "contribution" that will not be received enthusiastically by many readers.

The Method

MONTESSORI FOR PARENTS, by Dorothy Canfield Fisher, Bentley, 240 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Lee Cadwallader.

"Montessori" is the label for both an educational method and educational materials.

In this country the method is usually practiced in its pure form only in privately financed nursery schools. It gets its name from an Italian, Dr. Maria Montessori (1870-1952).

More than 50 years ago she caused an international stir in child study with the methods and materials she developed while working with Italian underprivileged children of preschool age. This book, addressed to the parent for use in enriching home-life education, was first published in 1912. However, the main body of information is as pertinent today as it was then. Perhaps it's even more appropriate for parents today than it was in 1912.

We've learned a lot more about childhood education, creativity and discipline in the last 50 odd years, and the most important discoveries we've made show us what fails.

We now know that extreme permissiveness fails (the Montessori Method has often erroneously been labled "permissive.")

We know autocratic methods fail (Montessori emphasized respect for the worth and dignity of the individual and developed self-discipline and self-reliance.)

Internationally, Montessori is once more attracting interest. New schools are opening throughout the world, some practicing the pure method, and some operating as mere caricatures of the method.

In this country we're using some of the method and materials in our "War on Poverty" programs, and just recently a Jesuit priest in Napal informed me that he intends to try setting up a pre-school in his mission based on Montessori.

To assist him, I forced myself to plow through more boring text than I thought I could bear on this subject. Now I wish that I had started with this book. It's agreat reward in clarity, cogency, and practicality.

The main message that comes through is that we must truly respect the worth and dignity of the individual instead of just paying lip service to it, as too many educators do today.

Lore Of The Lode

GHOST TOWNS AND MINING CAMPS OF CALIFORNIA by Remi Nadeau, Ward Ritchie Press, 170 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Bryce W. Anderson.

Guide book-histories of the Mother Lode are plentiful, but Remi Nadeau has added something extra in "Ghost Towns and Mining Camps of California," published by Ward Ritchie Press of Los Angeles and distributed by Lane Book Co. of Menlo Park.

Nadeau's sprightly volume includes the lesser known mines of the Mono-Inyo country along the southern Nevada border, Kern River, Death Valley and other southern California sites of early and later mining stampedes, plus the mines of the Feather River and the far north Coast Range.

Accompanying maps are excellent. The illustrations are from early pictures as contrast to the old camps—ghostly and otherwise—as they exist today.

Nadeau, fourth-generation Californian, is building up a shelf of books about his native state, past and present. He has packed this one with easy-to-read lore and information. It would be nice to have along on any mountain excursion into California's colorful past.

Modern Poet

RHYMED AND UNRHYMED, by Arthur Lerner, Swordsman Publishing Co., 47 pages, $2.50. Reviewed by Jean Langham.

Dr. Lerner is an associate professor at Los Angeles City College in the fields of philosophy and psychology, an intriguing fact right there. He is also a poet of skill, with a careful and sophisticated technique, who brings his ideas into nice focus by well sustained images of space and time, nature and psychiatry.

New demands have been put on traditional standards by increased knowledge in space and other sciences, but this modern poet does not find that these confrontations reduce the inherent dignity of man nor diminish his responsibilities to himself and his society. God and morals are not obsolete because we hear the "Beep-beep inferences":

"From the never-never-never time
Of a semantic realm
In outer space" from "20th Century Prespectives"

Rather he says:

"An astronautical flight
may reflect golden light; but a non-computerized role radiates from the human soul."
from "Meanwhile, Down
Here on Earth"

There are some striking points of contact with T. S. Eliot when he speaks about time as in "Variations":

"The past becomes a part of now and the present is a future
vow.

Outer space or orbital sphere, the time is now, the place is here."

But where Eliot tries to focus the past, present, and future with the purely spiritual mystical experience, Dr. Lerner is wrestling with our more tangible leaps into outer space and in some very exciting poems with "The terrors of the psyche's deep." It is an enticing comparison.

It is really a shame that more men don't read poetry (Dag Hammarskjold did), for this slim volume of very contemporary and readable poems would go quite well with after brandy. However, it does deserve more than a casual perusal.

A Space-Saver For Your Landscape

The Espalier Also Offers Bonus Of Garden Beauty

Nothing conceals bare walls and fences like "espaliers," and the list of plants that make good espaliers is almost endless in this area.

Here are some of the favorites:

Evergreen Magnolias, particularly the variety St. Mary, are ideal for broad, sweeping expanses where quick cover is highly desirable.

Choose a plant from a five-gallon container with low branching; save two or three tiers of branches and the central leader. Cut off other stems. Train those saved on wires strung between posts and keep taught with turnbuckles.

AS ADDITIONAL branches appear on the central leader, add more wires at one foot intervals. Keep outward-growing growth trimmed back for close, dense branching. Grooming may require attention two or three times during the summer.

For mass effects of red berries in fall and winter, use pyracantha espaliers, choosing the upright varieties (Graber, Rosedale, Stribling, Victory) for best branching habit. An extra dividend appears in spring in the form of massed white flowers.

Choose the warmest location possible.

A good espalier subject for sun or shade is the Evergreen Pear. Branches are long and willowy, easily adapted to a variety of training situations. Foliage is glossy; white flowers appear in early spring. There are no fruits.

FOR BIG, bold foliage, nothing surpasses the Japanese Loquat. The leaves are dull green with a gray pubescence underneath. Flowers appear in clusters in October and there are occasional fruits in spring. Loquats take full sun or part shade.

Almost any variety of camellia makes a good espalier in part shade but the easiest to train are the varieties with arching branches, like Chandleri and its many relatives.

Don't choose a place in full shade if you expect a good display of flowers. Camellias need about six hours of sunlight to produce the maximum quantity of blooms.

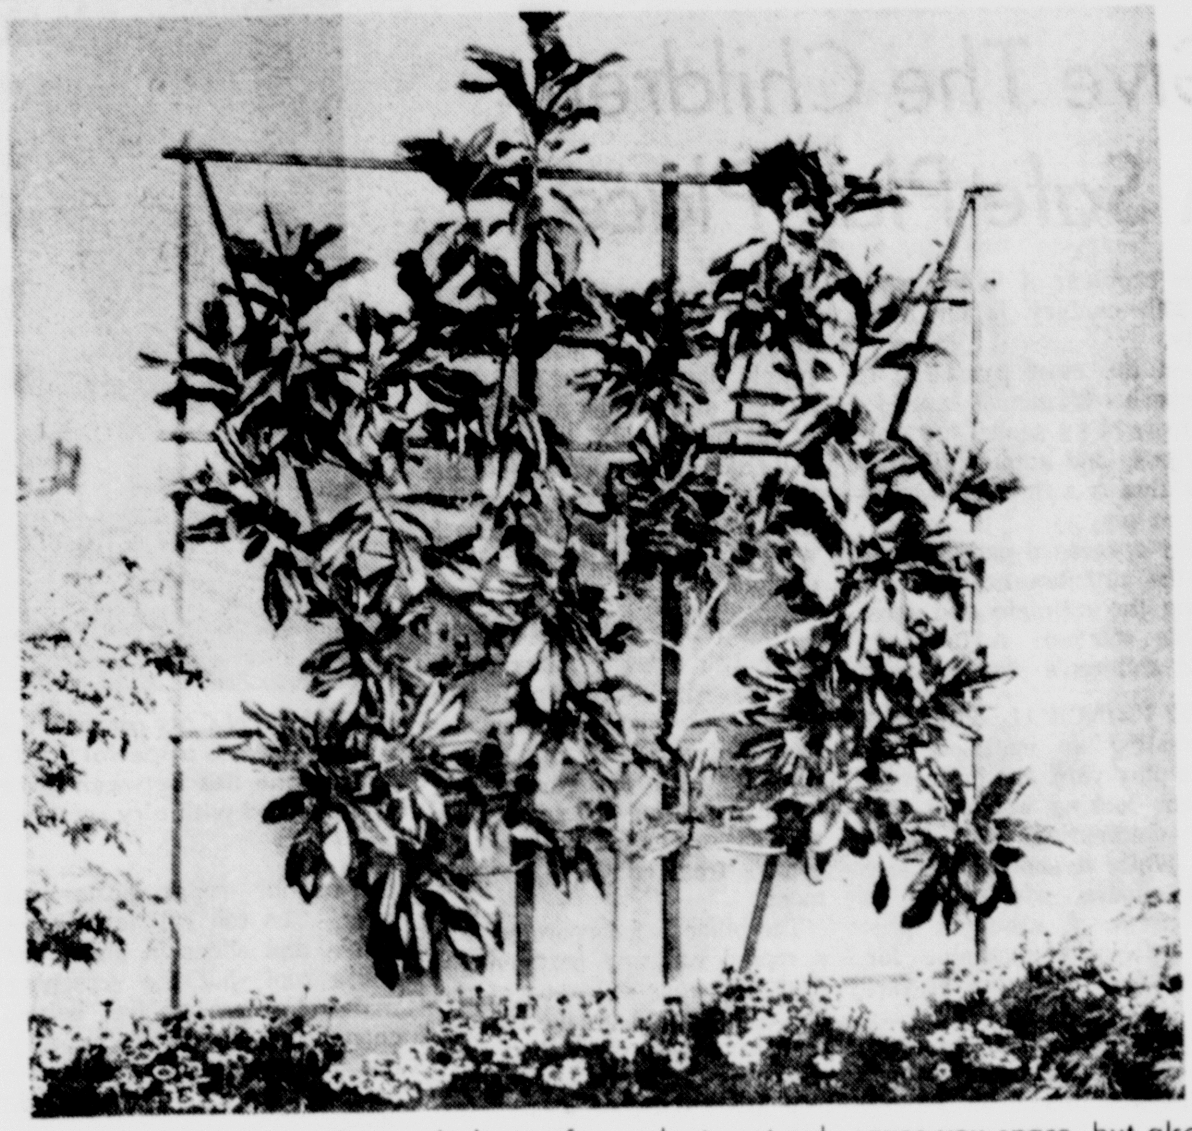

Growing espaliers for fruit production is a fascinating garden enterprise. Almost everyone knows about the deciduous fruits, like apples, pears, etc., but how about some of the more exotic types?

ALL MEMBERS of the citrus family make good espaliers, particularly the stronger growing varieties (oranges, lemons, grapefruit). The background of a sunny wall, reflecting plenty of warmth, improves both size and flavor of the fruits. Fragrant white blossoms have an added appeal.

Feijoas and Guavas are easily adapted to bare walls and fences, and the fruits make excellent salads and jellies. The Japanese persimmon offers a brilliant showing in fall, with its flaming foliage and orange-red fruits. The big, bold leaves of the fig will cover an otherwise uninteresting background in a hurry!

You do not necessarily have to start from "scratch" when undertaking espalier production in your garden.

Your nurseryman usually stocks a good variety of plants for the purpose. Pre-trained on an espalier trellis, they develop rapidly in their permanent location.

YOU CAN HAVE magnolias and plenty of garden space, too, thanks to the espalier, as shown here. This is a Southern Magnolia, an evergreen with deep, glossy green leaves all year, and immense cup-shaped flowers in the spring. The espaliering of plants not only saves you space, but also adds an unusual charm and flavor to your landscape, providing a distinctive pattern for an otherwise bare wall or fence. Some Expert Advice On Summer Care Of Your Roses

Once having experienced its benefits, most any gardener who grows outstanding roses will tell you that a good mulch goes a long way toward easing the problems of summer care.

Here from J. Awdry Armstrong, president of Armstrong Nurseries, are just a few of the reasons why mulching is nearly always a headliner in any smart rose grower's bag of tricks.

1. Rose roots are generally spread fairly close to the soil surface and direct sun on the root area can literally bake them. A good mulch protects and keeps the surface soil cool.

2. Many soils will form a hard baked crust under dry summer conditions. A mulch keeps the surface of the soil "open," allowing the root areation necessary to all plant life.

3. Roses need moisture, a good deal of it, and a good mulch will reduce the amount of watering necessary. This is extremely important in arid climates.

4. A mulch is the easiest and best way to keep weeds out of the rose garden. Weeds not only rob the rose bushes of moisture and soil nutrients but hoeing them out is a tedious chore and sometimes can damage some of the rose roots. A mulch also eliminates hand cultivation.

5. Mulchs break down gradually, providing the humus badly needed in loose sandy soils. It isn't easy to hold moisture and slow down the leaching out of the costly plant nutrients which we buy and apply, but a generous amount of humus in the soil will certainly held to that end.

YOU NEED NOT be too particular about the type of mulch you use. Wood shavings make a neat looking and very economical mulch. Straw of various types, shredded bark and even volcanic rock are used successfully. Armstrong hesitates to recommend grass clippings because if not spread thinly at each application, they will heat the soil.

It goes without saying that roses must be given adequate water — especially durirg the summer months when transpiration is rapid. And it is important that each irrigation penetrate as deeply as the lowest roots — at least a foot or more. Make it a point to learn how long this soaking takes in your particular soil. Also, learn how frequently such an irrigation is needed to keep the soil from drying out. This is important because some soils will hold water two or three times as long as others.

Obviously the hotter the weather, the more often you will have to irrigate. And in periods of low humidity, you will have to step up the frequency of irrigations.

ROSES ARE HEAVY feeders, and fertilization at bi-monthly intervals during the growing and blooming season will keep them in top condition. A balanced commercial fertilizer used according to directions will give excellent results. Well rotted manures will improve soil texture and also may act as a mulch. However, most of them are fairly low in nitrogen and better results will be obtained if you apply some chemical fertilizer, too. However, do not overdo the nitrogen or you may get too vigorous growth and smaller flowers.

Some very vigorous growers, like Eiffel Tower, Buccaneer, Tropicana, El Capitan and Queen Elizabeth, are often benefitted by a light summer pruning. This should consist mainly of cutting back long ungainly canes to promote additional bloom breaks and to keep these very strong growing kinds more in conformity with other varieties in the rose bed.

Generally, with summer heat, the aphids go and the problem of pest control eases somewhat. Nevertheless, one should be on the alert for infestations of other pests active during the summer months.

ONE OF THE most bothersome of these is the spider mite. If you have reason to suspect this pest because of a yellowish look to some of the leaves and actual leaf drop, examine the back side of a leaf through a magnifying glass: If the tiny spider-like mites are present, get busy with one of the special miticides.

Fungus diseases such as mildew, rust, blackspot, etc., vary in their seriousness by area. Your local nurseryman is probably better advised for proper controls of these diseases in your area than anyone. Visit him if you are being plagued by any of them.

Summer care of your plants is most important if you are to get the maximum enjoyment from growing roses, Armstrong advises.

GARDENERS CHECKLIST

Here is the Marin gardener's checklist for the coming week:

✔Hydrangeas should be planted now in rich, well-drained soil in filtered shade. The new, low-growing hybrids (three or four feet high) are ideal for tub planting or massing under trees. Choose from pink, salmon, scarlet or white varieties and keep them well watered throughout the summer.

✔Water hanging fuchsias daily now to keep them from drying out. Syringing the foliage with water too is beneficial.

✔To get full value from summer annuals, finish setting them out in the next few weeks. Available now at nurseries are ageratum (purple, blue, pink or white for edging), zinnias, petunias, verbena, cosmos and many others.

✔Buy started tuberous begonias now for quick color in garden beds or containers.

Give The Children A Safe Play Place

One problem of living in the mid-20th century is children's safety.

Even the most protected neighborhoods cannot consider themselves sealed off from strangers, and automobile traffic is always a threat to youngsters at play.

Many concerned parents have met the problem head-on, accepting the ultimate and most sensible solution: A fully enclosed children's play yard.

THE PRINCIPAL difficulties in creating an enclosed children's play yard are to prevent it from looking enclosed and from dominating the entire yard. While it should be close to the house, particularly to work areas, it shouldn't preempt all space available for adult outdoor living and the garden.

One very fine plan conceived for a family with four young children was to lay out a play yard between the house and the garage, in what would ordinarily have been a side service yard. The garage was purposely located at a great enough distance from the house to allow ample play area. In that location, it also serves as one wall of the play yard.

Its side door, opening into the yard, is kept locked whenever the mother must be in a back wing of the house for any length of time.

THE YARD IS bounded on the other two sides by airy cedar screens which are delicate enough in design to prevent any feeling of enclosure. One screen runs between the garage and house bordering the front walk and so serves as part of the home's front entrance arrangement.

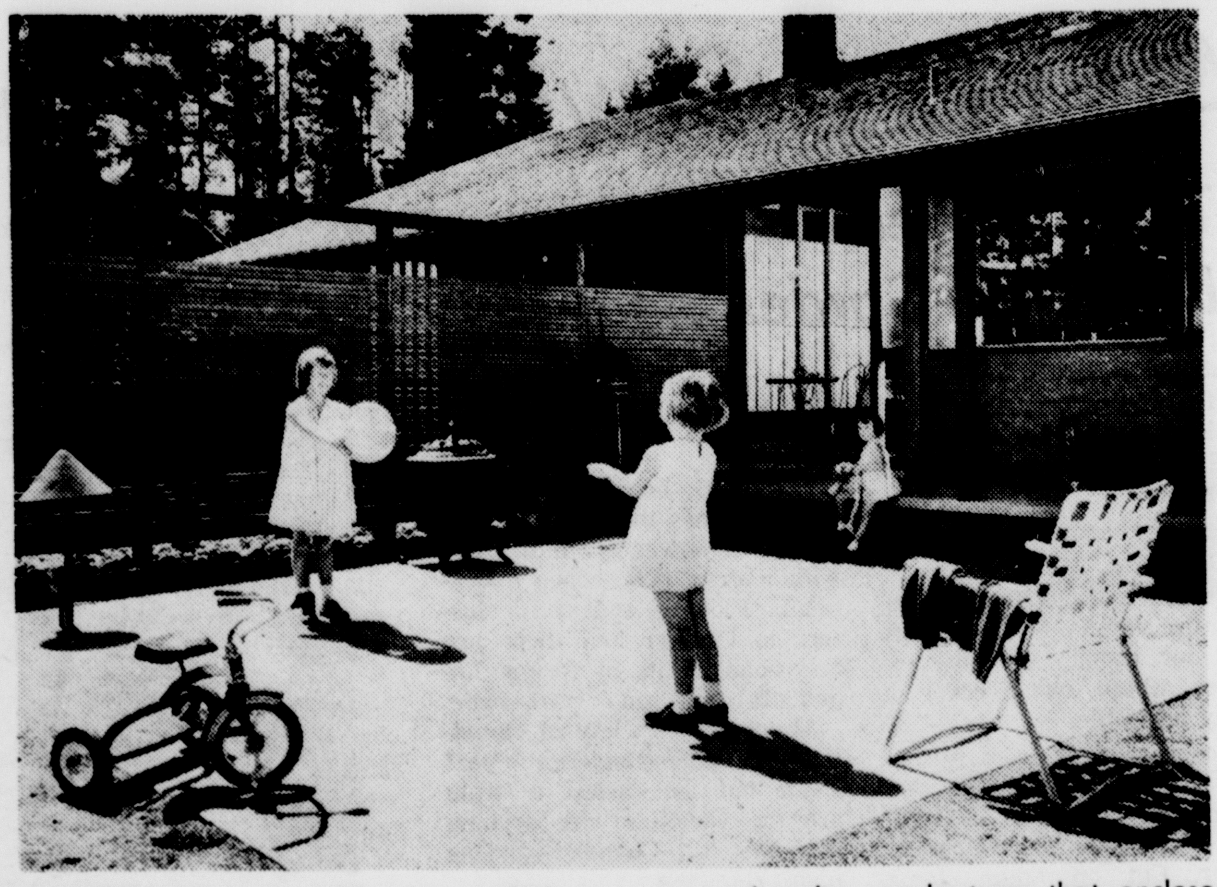

The other is incorporated into a roofed walkway between garage and rear entrance of the house. In both cases, the screens serve a purpose other than yard enclosure and so appear as principally decorative.

The screens are built of western red cedar one-by-ones applied horizontally to a frame of four-by-four cedar posts and rails. The top rail is at eave height and slides in under the house roof, but the screening material stops two feet below, enough to keep the feeling airy but not enough to allow a toe hold for climbing, curious toddlers.

BOTH SCREENS are stained a soft cedar shade to match the home's horizontal tongue-and-groove siding.

Inside, the play yard is equipped with a pad of paving for ball games and play with wheeled toys. Surrounding it is a wide border of bark chips, often used for school and park playgrounds since it prevents scraped knees and grass-stained clothing. There are no splinters in the bark material to hurt little hands.

Finally, a handsome engawa of fir two-by-fours slides out from house walls, at floor level. Nestled under house eaves, the engawa provides shaded space for the children's games, and also works as an ideal outdoor dining area for the entire family.

CHILDREN CAN romp in freedom and play safely when a special yard is provided. This one lies between garage and house, is fenced with airy screens of spaced western red cedar one-by-twos that enclose without barricading. Deck nestled under house eaves offers sheltered play space for misty days.

A Spray Paint Job To Rejuvenate Kitchen Cabinets

Rejuvenate your metal kitchen cabinets—with paint.

It's almost the last thing one thinks of doing, but it works.

One woman thought of having her metal doors and cabinet drawers covered with everything from wall paper to burlap—not very practical considering the large amount of use these cabinet doors and drawers get.

THEN ONE day at the suggestion of a friend she called a spray painter. The price wasn't steep, considering he used a baking method of painting, but he couldn't do the work for quite a while. Then, too, doors had to be removed and delivered to him.

Well, if we're going to do all that, reasoned the woman's husband, why not spray paint the doors ourselves? We'll try one, if it doesn't work, we'll take all the doors to the experts.

Typical do-it-yourselfers, they experimented right on a door, instead of on a piece of metal. But, it worked. The paint went on so smoothly, they couldn't believe their eyes.

FIRST, THEY removed the doors and the metal door grasp, then they sanded all rough and worn places, washed the doors, removing grease and dirt.

The first door was not so smooth as the others, and they've considered redoing it, but the part that ran a wee bit is not so noticeable in the light cast on that cabinet, so they are not worrying about it.

The warm sunny yellow color they chose has livened up their cold blue-and-white color scheme considerably. Some of the blue — tile on walls — must remain, but it doesn't clash with the pale yellow.

THEIR ORIGINAL idea was to repaint the cabinets in white, but an interior designer suggested they reconsider. White, he pointed out, can be many shades from blue-white to deep ivory, and unless all cabinets and appliances were being painted, the contrasts would be too great.

They are now thinking about spraying refrigerator door and dishwasher front. But neither appliance really needs it. The white looks good with the yellow and they can skip the other doors if they want.

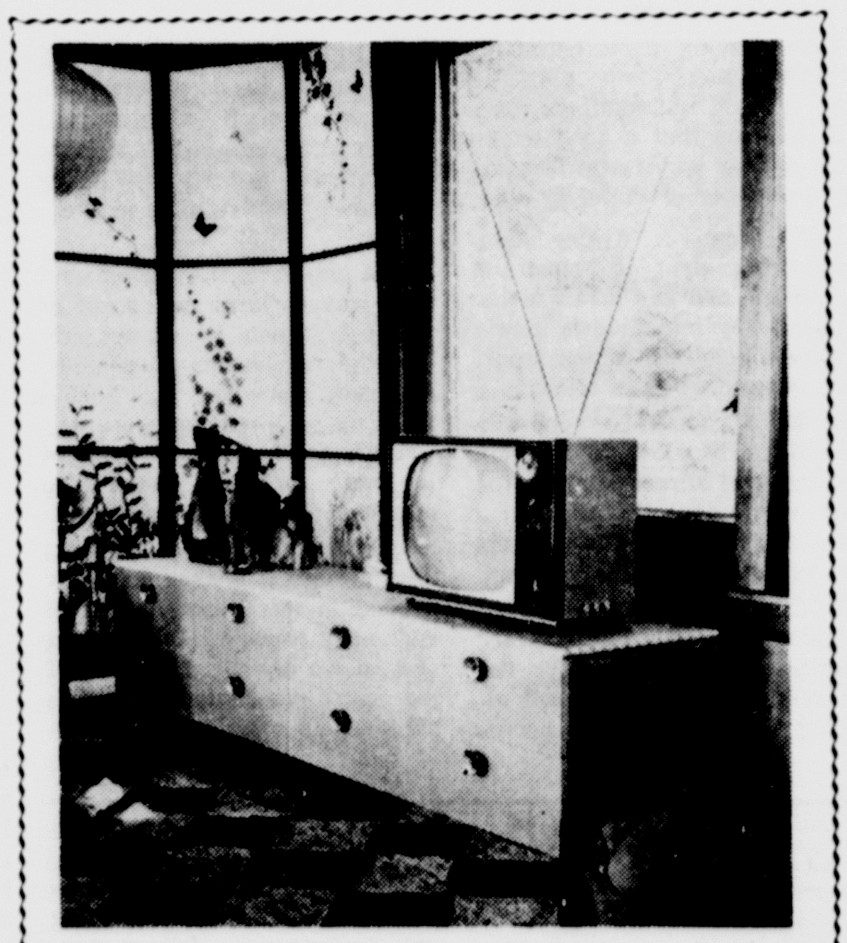

The cost of the spray brought each door refinishing job to about 50 cents, a reasonable investment, they figure.

SO OVERWHELMED with the effect is the lady of the house that she has decided to make a stencil of a flower, sort of a stylized zinnia, to put on the door of each top cabinet. The idea came originally as a plan to cover up the one door that had the slight defect, but now that she has given it some thought, she has been carried away. She visualizes a tall zinnia with sea-blue stem and coral-pink petals.

If she were a better artist, she says, she'd cover all the doors with little flowers—zinnais, daisies, anemones and so on. Where else does one need giddiness than in the kitchen, she says, and it's almost the last place you'll ever find it.

Even if one starts off with colored appliances, they are bound to be static looking, she points out.

She plans to keep whatever art she applies away from the section where one opens the door. And when she gets tired of the color of the kitchen doors, she'll just redo them in a new color and design.

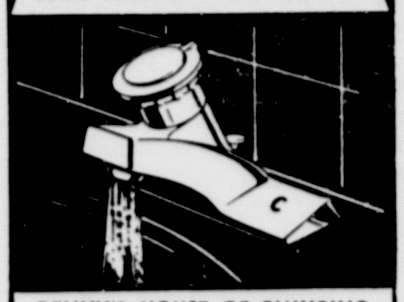

WHEN THE magical world of plastics produced preformed cabinet drawers, it started a small revolution in the construction of built-ins and furniture. These precision-made drawers greatly simplify construction. They are used to fine advantage in the cabinet shown here. The versatile furniture piece can be used in many other ways—even converted into a fashionable vanity for bathroom or bedroom. Either plywood or flakeboard can be used. For the Easi-Bild pattern, send 75 cents to Independent-Journal, P.O. Box 215, Briarcliff Manor, N.Y., and ask for Pattern No. 721.

A Tip On Painting Sashes And Screens

When painting shutters, screens and storm sash remove them from the house and lay flat on supports. This will make for an easier and better paint job.

Be sure all dust, dirt and peeling paint is removed before you start to work.

A Study Of Protestant Retreats

"Forty-eight Hours With God," a program reflecting the current growing Protestant interest in religious retreats, will be presented on ABC-TV's "Directions '65" tomorrow at 1 p.m. over KGO.

ABC news correspondent Don Goddard will be host of the program tracing the growing interest in retreats since World War II.

Participants in "48 Hours With God" will be Dr. Charles Francis Whiston of the Church Divinity School, Berkeley, a leader of the retreat program in California; Dr. John Oliver Nelson, former Professor of Divinity at Yale, and now director of Kirkridge Retreat Center, Bangor, Pa.; and Dr. Robert Cox, director of Wainright House, Rye, N.Y.

Also appearing on the program will be Mrs. Alexander Wiley, Wright Prickett and Fred Stuart, three members of the laity, discussing their participation in retreats, what they bring to a retreat and what they take from it.

Written by Jack Mitchell, produced by Wiley Hance and directed by Robert DeLaney, "48 Hours With God" is a production of NBC News public affairs department in association with the National Council of Churches.

The Only Cure For Gambling

"I think people that gamble are really addicts, like dope addicts, and they just can't stay away from it. Gambling is a vice and a sickness. And the only cure is to go completely broke."

The speaker was no social service do-gooder, but a man who knows—an ex-gambler-addict who now stands on the other side of the table as the manager of a posh London gambling palace.

He was talking with Warren Wallace, director of the B. F. Goodrich telespecial on gambling, "Everybody's Got a System," as part of Wallace's background material on the story of gambling around the world. The hour-long special, will be seen on KGO-TV Friday at 8:30 p.m.

WELL DRESSED, obviously prosperous, the casino operator continued, "A true gambling addict really only starts living when he starts gambling. He goes to bed and waits for the moment the casino opens to start living again. Like a drug addict would wait for the next shot."

"And the worst thing that could happen to a gambler," he mused, "would be, say, to go to the club at 7 o'clock in the evening, get very lucky and win a lot of money by 9 o'clock. He would have all that money and have to stop. But there's nothing else for him to do. He has no other pleasure in life but gambling. So, eventually, he has dinner, and at 11 o'clock he's gambling again. He can't stop. He's not there to win. He's just there to gamble."

This man, who has played on both sides of the gaming tables, is the first to admit that no gambler can ever beat the house. "I have never heard of a gambler winning in the end. Maybe for a short period, but in the long run, you can't beat the house's percentage."

WALLACE, FOR "Everybody's Got a System," asked the club manager what his feelings, as an ex-gambler, were for his customers.

"I have a lot of sympathy for them—like people that drink too much. Like alcoholics and anything else in life, including sex, their families, their jobs, or anything. Everything else is second fiddle to gambling. To real gamblers, Lady Luck is their only love, almost their religion."

And what happens to "Old Gamblers?"

"The rich person will eventually finish up broke. But the average working man, with a steady income, will lose a substantial part of his income every year. He'll just struggle through life, always on the brink of financial disaster."

The casino operator went on to explain that he had been a "hooked" gambler for years, always on the verge of being flat broke. "But I was very, very lucky. I realized what was happening before I was completely broke, and had enough money left to go to the other side."

BRITISH COMIC Terry-Thomas is obviously a winner after visiting a legalized London betting shop, a stock broker, gambling ship, carnival, and a Las Vegas gaming palace while gathering first-hand experience in order to narrate "Everybody's Got A System," next Friday, at 8:30 p.m. on KGO-TV. The special will take a lighthearted, but penetrating, around-the-world look at gamblers and their games, from penny numbers players to the bet-a-million Wall Street stock brokers.
